New Dealers Trail in Early Returns in Wisconsin

Finnegan, Garnerite, Ahead for Senator; Fay Beats O'Connor In N. Y. Primary

Yesterday's Voting

WISCONSIN—Anti-New Deal candidates leaped into the lead for Democratic nomination for Governor and Senator, while Republican Gov. Julius P. Heil was far ahead for renomination.

NEW YORK—John J. O'Connor, 1938 "purge" victim seeking a House comeback, was defeated for the G. O. P. nomination and was behind Representative James H. Fay for the Democratic designation. House incumbents in other districts were leading.

MASSACHUSETTS—Attorney General Paul A. Dever defeated former Lieut. Gov. Francis E. Kelly in the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Republican Gov. Saltonstall was unopposed for renomination.

Wisconsin Results

Milwaukee, Sept. 17 (AP).—Opponents of President Roosevelt's Administration led for the Democratic nominations for Governor and U. S. Senator in early returns from today's Wisconsin primary.

The vote was from about one-sixth of the State's 3,034 precincts and came from a majority of the 71 counties, but did not include Milwaukee.

In the Democratic gubernatorial contest, William R. Callahan was well out in front of Francis E. McGovern, former Governor and a Roosevelt supporter, with 4,221 votes to 3,253 in 533 precincts.

Anti-New Dealers were running one-two in the Democratic race for Senator. James E. Finnegan, former State attorney general, had a 1,700-vote margin over William D. Carroll, chairman of his party's State central committee, in 526 of the State's 3,034 precincts. Both supported John N. Garner for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Cudahy a Poor Fourth

They had substantial leads over James J. Kerwin, who advocated the Roosevelt foreign program and claimed agreement with many of the President's major policies.

Finnegan had 3,913; Carroll, 2,716, and Kerwin, 1,242.

The eleventh-hour attempt of New Deal leaders to put John Cudahy over as a write-in candidate apparently met with little success in the out-State communities. He was running a poor fourth. Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium during the German blitzkrieg, was entered in the race last Friday.

Incomplete returns indicated that the Republicans were looking to business men as their standard-bearers in the November election. The Republican total was running ahead of combined Democratic and Progressive vote.

Gov. Julius P. Heil, who asked reelection on his record, had 25,641 votes to 11,752 for Dr. James K. Robinson in 580 precincts.

La Follette Unopposed

Fred H. Clausen, farm machinery manufacturer, led in the seven-man Republican Senatorial race. Dr. John P. Koehler, former Health Commissioner of Milwaukee, was in second place and a dead man, Dr. Glenn Frank, in third.

Clausen had 8,501; Koehler, 5,544, and Frank, 4,884 in 529 precincts, with four other candidates behind them.

Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, was killed in an automobile accident Sunday

The Gallup Poll

Jersey, Pennsylvania, N. Y. Favor Roosevelt

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 17.—Dramatic new gains for President Roosevelt in a month which saw a fierce flare-up of the German onslaught on Great Britain, as well as the President's transfer of 50 destroyers in exchange for naval bases, are revealed in the American Institute of Public Opinion's latest returns from three pivotal Eastern States—New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Gaining 4 percentage points on Wendell Willkie in New York State, 3 in Pennsylvania and 5 in New Jersey, President Roosevelt has taken the lead away from the Republican candidate in these three States and buttressed his national position at this stage of the race, the survey shows.

What has happened in these three Eastern States since the previous Institute survey, August 25, is sufficient to show the problem that faces Mr. Willkie on his present trip through the Far West, however. As in the past, the intensification of the war in Europe has been followed by a rise in Roosevelt support. Mr. Willkie, whose active campaign is just beginning, must now attempt to overhaul President Roosevelt in States like New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, which the Republican candidate held during the first weeks of the campaign and which are probably necessary for his election.

Race Still Is Close

The race in these three States is still close—as close as it was a month ago—but the advantage lies today with President Roosevelt instead of with Mr. Willkie, the survey shows.

The State-by-State vote of those with definite choices at this time, with the net change for Roosevelt since August 25, is as follows:

Electoral Votes	Today % F.D.R.	% Willkie	Change for F.D.R.
47 New York	52	48	+4
36 Pennsylvania	52	48	+3
16 New Jersey	54	46	+5

In each of these States the Institute survey found a substantial number of voters "undecided" or without definite choices at this time—12 per cent in New York, 11 per cent in Pennsylvania and 13 per cent in New Jersey. Many of them still say, "We don't know very much about Willkie yet; we're waiting to hear what he has to say."

The importance of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey lies in the fact that together they account for 99 electoral votes, or almost one-fifth of the 531 in the electoral college.

In New York City, where President Roosevelt registered 75 per cent of the vote in 1936, he now leads by 67 per cent. In Philadelphia, where Roosevelt received 62 per cent of the vote four years ago, his strength today is at 60 per cent.

	% F.D.R.	% Willkie	Gain for F.D.R.
New York City	67	33	+4
Upstate New York	38	62	+4
Philadelphia	60	40	+3

Willkie Boldly Invades South

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Sept. 17.—Wendell L. Willkie traveled over the plains of Texas and through the mountains of New Mexico today, exhorting the South to abandon its 80-year-old tradition of voting Democratic and to preserve the older Jeffersonian tradition against a third term.

A day-long journey found the magnetic Hoosier in this lofty town tonight addressing what was said to be the largest political turnout in Albuquerque's history, a throng of 15,000 cattlemen and sheepmen that overflowed a WPA project called Tingley Park.

At Amarillo, Tex., earlier the Republican Presidential nominee had said "Southerners say to me we believe in everything you believe in.

"But, they say, they have a great tradition in the South, a tradition 80 years or more old, and that is the tradition of voting Democratic. They say it's difficult for us to abandon that tradition.

"No one in all this land could be more sympathetic with that viewpoint than I. Traditions have a way of being true.

"I would say that under normal circumstances for the people of the South to live up to that tradition would be a very proper and a very wise thing to do.

"But the people of the South are faced with a conflict of traditions. In order to keep that 80-year-old Democratic tradition they must abandon another tradition. That tradition is 150 years old."

Saying that rotation of persons in office was necessary "for the preservation of democracy," Willkie continued:

"The only difference between this great democracy of ours and totali-

Damage Placed at $500,000 In 15-Alarm Baltimore Fire

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 17.—A 15-alarm fire roared through nine acres of baled cork at the Crown Cork & Seal Co.'s plant today, threatened nearby oil storage tanks, and caused damage company officials estimated at "more than $500,000."

A thick column of smoke rolled over East Baltimore and pillared hundreds of feet in the air, visible as far as Annapolis, 26 miles away. Intense heat hampered 300 firemen, four of whom were burned or overcome by smoke.

Hours after the first alarm, the fire still burned fiercely but fire department officials expressed belief they could prevent it from spreading.

Flames at one time leaped across Kresson street and ignited fences around the properties of the Maryland Cooperage Co. and Boston Iron & Metal Co.

A fire-fighting force of the Standard Oil Co. kept close watch for burning embers caught in an updraft and dropped as far as 1,000 feet away.

A company foreman said he believed a spark from a freight train started the blaze. He said the flames burst forth "almost with the force of an explosion," and overran the cord piles from end to end in ten minutes.

Fort Belvoir Fire Overcomes Nine

Nine enlisted men were overcome by smoke while fighting a fire which swept through the top floor of a three-story brick barracks at Fort Belvoir, Va., late yesterday.

The soldiers, revived at the post hospital, were expected to be dismissed after overnight observation.

The blaze, discovered as the men returned from mess shortly after 6 p. m., was confined to the top

English Tanks Inflict Heavy Losses as They Fall Back

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 17.—Italian motorized troops fought their way tonight beyond Sidi Barrani, almost 60 miles inside Egypt from Libya, reaching the beginning of an asphalt road leading 350 miles eastward to the Suez Canal, vital link of Britain's empire life-line.

British tank units retired before the Italian coastal sweep after inflicting heavy casualties, British headquarters announced. No major battle yet has been fought, nor have the main British troops collided with the Blackshirts, it was said.

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's troops employed two tank columns supported by a strong rearguard in the drive into Sidi Barrani, which they occupied last night. Eleven-ton medium sized tanks and a large number of lighter tanks were used.

The lighter tanks proved especially vulnerable to British fire, many being disabled, the British said.

The coastal strip now held by the Italians is all scorched desert land with a few mud hut villages and waterholes. Behind Sidi Barrani toward Libya the Italians hold two other coastal cities, the ports of Salum and Buqbuq.

The British said three Italian divisions, totaling about 45,000 men, were encamped at Salum but large forces still were massed in Libya. The main Fascist offensive will begin when those troops are thrown into Egypt, the British said. The British estimate the Italians have more than 260,000 available men.

British bombers aided tank units in the blistering desert battle under 120 degree temperatures before Sidi Barrani fell to the Fascists.

Heavy sandstorms also clouded the battle area.

The British thus far have claimed at least a 2-to-1 advantage in aerial duels.

Where the British intend to take a stand and strike to halt the advance is a military secret.

British Building Trap

Apparent British strategy is to force the Italians to exhaust vital supplies and lengthen communication lines vulnerable to British naval units and sea aircraft operating off the coastal road.

The British have been using their Mediterranean fleet to cut off Italy from supplying her African possessions.

That fleet has been concentrated at Alexandria, only 200 miles east of Sidi Barrani. The next Italian objective along the modern coastal road is Matruh, 100 miles away.

Italian bombers now are almost 100 miles closer to Alexandria than before the Egyptian offensive began. Formerly they operated from Bardia, Libya, 30 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Egypt still has not declared war on Italy, but the government rushed antiaircraft preparations in the fertile Nile Valley where almost all Egypt's population is concentrated.

Apparently the government is counting on the British to stem the Italian advance long before they near that area.

Business Leaders And Economists Discuss Vast Program

By Robert Kleiman,

The Administration's leading economists last night outlined a $20,000,000,000 Government borrowing-spending program to a score of the Nation's outstanding bankers, industrialists and financiers, who for eight years have been the bitterest critics of the spend-lend theory.

When they were through, a representative of one of New York's greatest banking firms arose and declared:

"I agree with everything that has been said. The charge that the New Dealers are against capitalism is completely unwarranted."

The occasion was a conference at the Mayflower Hotel among 48 business and finance executives, Government economists and labor leaders on the financing of national defense.

Callan, an auto salesman, said he had won the money at a racetrack and had just left a poolroom when he was assaulted. He described one of his assailants as a man wearing a "big apple" hat, but was unable to give descriptions of the others.

He said they fled in a large black sedan, for which police broadcast a lookout. They were also looking for witnesses of the incident.

Churchill Puts Toll at 10,000 In Two Weeks

Outcome of Air Battle Can Be Awaited With Confidence, He Asserts

London, Sept. 17.—King George, the government and Parliament set an example for the harassed people of this battered capital today by carrying on in their accustomed way while Nazi raiders continued to shatter landmarks and shrines and kill civilians with bombs hurled from high above the clouds.

His eyes red-rimmed, like most other Londoners, Prime Minister Churchill disclosed before a well-filled house that the last fortnight of raids has caused 10,000 civilian casualties, contrasting them with the small losses sustained in the same period by all the armed forces of the nation.

With moving but convincing solemnity in which there was no trace of bombast or braggadocio, Britain's war leader declared that great as London's suffering is the outcome of the prolonged air battle, raging even as he spoke, could be awaited with "sober but increasing confidence."

Repeated visits of German bombers failed to prevent Commons from holding a public and private session and making plans for regular sessions to be held in the future without public announcement in advance of the hours of sitting.

Nor did they prevent King George from decorating the relatives of war

Loophole Lets Men Get Out Of Country and Skip Draft

By John G. Norris

A loophole was discovered in the Conscription Act yesterday under which men may escape the draft without subjecting themselves to penalty by leaving the United States prior to registration.

Officials of the Army-Navy selective service committee said that men who are outside the country on registration day, October 16, are under no compulsion to return. Under President Roosevelt's proclamation Monday, they must register within five days after coming back to the United States, but may stay away indefinitely.

Meanwhile, officials worked overtime throughout the country to complete plans for the registration of some 16,500,000 Americans, from 21 to 35, inclusive. Governors and their military staffs prepared recommendations for the appointment of local draft boards for submission to the President and prepared the local registration and supervisory machinery.

Here, the selective service committee, which will be the nucleus of the national draft administration, moved into larger offices in the Potomac Park Apartments close to the War Department. As soon as the President issues an Executive order, perhaps tomorrow or Friday, authorizing the administration, the committee will expand into an organization of close to 300.

Representatives of the War Department at the same time urged Congress to act quickly on legislation providing debt relief for draftees in financial difficulties. Maj. Edwin Barber of the Army General Staff, told the House military committee that an immediate revision of the 1918 Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act was necessary as an aid to morale.

200 Nazi Planes Driven Off As Channel Storm Scatters Invasion Fleet; New Cannon Shelling London, Berlin Says

The War Today

GERMANY'S BOMBERS, once repulsed by British fighter planes in a spectacular battle in a 100-mile-an-hour hurricane, return to London to rain death and destruction on the British capital for almost 10 hours, longest raid of the war.

NAZI LONG-RANGE GUNS, the Germans claim, are helping the air force by shelling London from the French coast, 90 miles away; seven of London's ten airports are damaged, utilities and transportation disrupted, and important factories wrecked, Berlin asserts, as press watches hopefully for weakening of British morale.

WINSTON CHURCHILL warns Britain invasion still threatens, despite repeated R. A. F. bombing of Nazi bases and reported dispersal of "invasion fleet" by Channel storms; London's casualties put at 13,000 since June.

Great Guns Roar

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 17.—German long-range guns which in the past week have been shelling the English coast near Dover, have extended their fire to the heart of London, military quarters in Berlin said today. For the present, it is stated, only test shells are sent off every now and then in order to establish the range.

Though a systematic shelling of towns has not yet begun, it is stated here that this may be expected any time. When the batteries on the French coast open a steady fire, it is claimed, the air force will have a highly effective and destructive assistance in its work of pulverizing Britain's capital.

The havoc wrought in London by yesterday's and last night's attacks, the Germans state, was greater than anything felt in the capital before. The German air force, it appears, again opened its throttle full over the week-end and tonight it is reported the "attack continues despite the rain storm."

Claim Airports Hit

The Germans now claim they have bombed and "rendered useless" seven of London's ten most important airports. They were so extensively destroyed, it is stated, that "it appears impossible that they can be repaired for use in the near future."

The German high command asserts that airports in southern-central England were extensively bombed in the course of yesterday's activities. Harbor industries of Whitby, it is stated, were likewise "effectively bombed."

The British antiaircraft fire is said to be violent, but ineffective. During the present stormy weather German fliers have apparently changed their tactics and are flying either singly or in small groups, appearing suddenly to drop their bombs and then disappearing again into the clouds.

Last night, it is reported here, German bombers destroyed numerous high tension lines running into London from power stations beyond the city. Thus, it is stated,

Man Proposes

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Sept. 18.—German bombers subjected London to the longest air raid of the war last night and early today, hurling bombs throughout the capital for nine hours and 54 minutes despite hurricane winds and the combined bitter defenses of R. A. F. fighters and antiaircraft cannon.

The alarm lasted from 8:06 p. m. Tuesday (2:06 p. m. E. S. T.) until 6 a. m. today, exceeding the 9-hour-and-40-minute alarm of September 8-9.

Beaten Off by Day

The Nazis, in waves 200 or more strong, were reported beaten off early in the evening over the Kentish coast by R. A. F. fighter pilots aided by winds which the air ministry news service said reached 100 miles an hour.

In abating weather, the Germans returned later to maintain their "death patrol" over London's rooftops until full dawn.

In the Straits of Dover, the heaviest seas since spring kept the German "invasion fleet" close in the French ports, 24 hours after many of the barge concentrations had been scattered by the gale, according to the air ministry.

Bombs blasted many different areas around the metropolis in addition to central London.

West End Suffers

Incendiary and high explosive bombs showered down on the West End district, which had been hit in Tuesday afternoon's raids, and on East London.

Casualties were reported in the West End. Two department stores, hit by both types of bombs, suffered severe damage.

Casualties were reported at one, where several hundred persons were crowded into a shelter at the rear of the store. Glass from the

Tidal Basin Trees To Be Replaced On 2-for-1 Basis

As a preliminary to relandscaping of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial approaches, 75 Japanese cherry trees were uprooted yesterday. National Capital Parks officials were quick to explain, however, that at least two will be planted for every one removed.

Continuing a job which was begun Monday night, workmen leveled ten elms and a maple, as well as the cherry trees. Meantime, other workers proceeded with alterations to the Tidal Basin's contour, another phase of the Jefferson Memorial project.

windows was scattered five blocks away, the burglar alarms were set shrilling, and wax dummies sprawled amid the debris.

Casualties also were reported when a bomb dropped near a hotel.

The raiders returned to several of the same targets they had bombed during the day.

A number of fires from the "Molotoff Breadbaskets" were quickly attacked and subdued by firemen and householders.

Glide in Silently

The Germans seemed to be using a silent, gliding strategy in this their eleventh consecutive overnight raid on London.

In an effort to surprise the repeatedly bellowing antiaircraft guns the Germans stole in low, with motors idle, dropped their bombs and then climbed with roaring motors.

Lighter craft were being used for this mode of attack.

At least 12 Germans were shot down and three British planes were lost up to midnight, the air ministry announced. Two British pilots are safe.

Meanwhile the air ministry gave some details of the spectacular, wind-blown engagement of early Tuesday night.

Over Kent, Surrey and the Thames Estuary, the air ministry said, battles were fought in a 100-mile-wind—a wind which kept the English Channel leaping wildly and thus protected this kingdom from any immediate Nazi attempt at invasion.

Although the British defenders were handicapped by heavy clouds, the ministry said, they knocked down at least four planes, and anti-aircraft gunners along the southeast coast shot down two more.

The Germans, who had been headed for London, were declared then to have "promptly scattered" and to have fled for safety.

The attack on London itself began last night at 8:06 p. m. (2:06 p. m. Eastern standard time) and after midnight still went on high in the thick, scudding clouds over the city. At times the roar of German bombs rose above the hoarse bellow of the antiaircraft.

Early reports of casualties showed an undetermined number of Londoners killed in the southwest. In a southern area of the city a string of six high explosives was dropped simultaneously.

All day yesterday the gray, wet skies of England were alive with aircraft. Seven German planes were shot down, the air ministry said.

German bombers struck on at London with angry persistence; setting off five raid alarms between breakfast and dinner time. In their fifth appearance they dropped bombs which could be heard dully in one area of the metropolis while the antiaircraft made its rejoinder with bursting shrapnel.

ant to the Secretary of Commerce; Lauchlin Currie, administrative assistant to the President, and Benjamin Cohen, general counsel of the National Power Policy Commission.

Among the business representatives were B. J. Buttenwieser, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Emmet F. Connely, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America; T. Jefferson Coolidge, chairman of the United Fruit Co.; Robert L. Garner, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co., and Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The Government economists advocated tapping the Nation's vast unused savings reserve for the financing of the defense program. The Government, they said, should borrow the money for defense expenditures, rather than attempt to pay the costs by increased taxation.

Such a program, they explained, would achieve full employment within three years, putting idle labor and idle capital to work producing armaments.

They emphasized that increased taxation would withdraw money from the income stream, forcing the limitation of consumer goods production so that a larger proportion of the existing economy could be devoted to defense production.

The resources of the United States are sufficient, they said, to bear the cost of rearmament without reducing the Nation's standard of living. But they indicated that this would be possible only by shifting the economic machine into high gear and achieving full production.

There is no need, they said, for further Government control of business, or any form of regimentation, as long as production expands smoothly.

"Government control over the economy will only increase, if vigorous private investment fails," a representative of the Defense Commission said.

"Our purpose is to achieve defense needs without cutting into the average man's consumption of the necessities of life. A high consumption level for all of our people is one of our best defense measures."

Production today, it was explained, is 9 per cent above the 1929 peak and 23 per cent above the 1935-1937 level. Production could increase to 70 per cent above the 1935-1937 level before utilizing fully the Nation's labor supply.

With the continuance of defense spending, employment should jump 3,000,000 by June, 1941, and 5,500,000 by June, 1942. Full employment would be reached in the fiscal year of 1943, a year which would see a national income of $110,000,000,000.

"The democracies of Europe fell before Hitler because they were not making full use of their economy, and Germany was," one economist declared. "The heart of our defense must be fully functioning economy."

they have further limited the capital's supply of electricity, since numerous power works in the city itself already have been bombed and destroyed.

It is reported here that the Armstrong aircraft works in Birmingham has been so seriously damaged that it is no longer able to work at full capacity, having been forced to give up its export production.

The Rolls Royce plant, likewise, is said to have been extensively destroyed with production almost at a standstill. One German attack, it is stated, destroyed 5,000 motorcycles.

Railroads Get Attention

Authoritative quarters emphasize the use of dive-bombers in yesterday's attacks and point out that the German air offensive is "increasing in vigor." It is stated that bombs are now being concentrated on railroad stations and railroad lines. The Germans, it is asserted, are meeting with comparatively little resistance from the R. A. F., which leads the Germans to the conclusion that the "defensive strength of Britain already has been hit hard."

Yesterday the German high command reports only three British machines were shot down, and one destroyed on the ground. Two German planes are "missing."

German coastal artillery, the German high command reports, again shelled the Dover coast, registering several hits on British freighters.

The British last night undertook no flights to Germany, it is stated. Sunday night, however, it is claimed here, they bombed a cemetery near Kiel.

German night interceptors shot down one of several R. A. F. bombers which flew in over the Reich's territory tonight, it is reported in Berlin. The British machines, it is asserted, flew in from the northwest and the southwest, flying very high. After one of the R. A. F. machines was shot down the rest allegedly turned back and headed for home.

Following Gen. Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch's inspection of the German troops in France, Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander in chief of the German navy, likewise, inspected German naval units along the Channel and the Atlantic coasts.

New Threats Impend

Each of the giant guns planted along the Channel can throw a high-explosive shell across the intervening 90 miles of space every 15 minutes, the Germans say.

The new guns are highly improved models with a far greater range than the World War gun which shelled Paris from the Forest of Compiegne, 75 miles away. German news reels already have shown some of them in action in their French emplacements. Their range, it is believed, enables them not only to shell London but objectives as far as 75 miles beyond the English capital.

Big Bargains in Men's Suits in Savile Row and Bond Street Likely as Raiders Give Expensive West End a 'Nasty Shake'

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 18.—Many of the most famous shops of the world were bombed early Tuesday morning when German pilots, developing more expensive tastes, deserted London's dockland and raided the very heart of London's West End.

Both high explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped in Regent street, Piccadilly, Bond street, Savile Row, Oxford street, Berkeley Square and Park Lane, and while they did not demolish any notable buildings the amount of glass knocked out in Regent street alone is unbelievable.

All day Tuesday air raid precaution workers and street cleaners shoveled glass into large trucks along this street which corresponds with Fifth avenue in New York between Thirty-fourth street and Central Park.

All windows in Liberty's department store, the favorite of many Americans, were knocked out. Austin Reed's was damaged again, the second time within a week, and among other premises whose windows were smashed were Revillon's famous fur shop, Jaeger's dress shop, the Gallerie Lafayette, Cafe Royal. Even the Queen's dressmakers, near Berkeley Square, had a pretty rough night.

"Got a Nasty Shake"

Burlington Arcade, the glass-enclosed expensive shopping center, was badly hit. Though the Royal Academy, next door, was not damaged, the Arcade's glass roof was stoved in and what was not wrecked is now too dangerous to use.

Berkeley Square was virtually without a pane of glass last night. It was shaken up last week, but Tuesday morning it was really rocked. Here again none of the sites of famous old houses, where William Pitt, the Marquess of Lansdowne, Lord Clive, and Horace Walpole lived, was smashed up, but the place got a nasty shake.

One bomb fell in Park Lane not so far from a house that was once occupied by the King. It threw up the park railings, damaged the ornamental water fountain, and filled part of the street with glass.

Gesture of Defiance

One large building in Saville Row which for years has set the styles for men's clothing all over the world, was demolished by a bomb. At the time the caretaker's family was taking shelter in the basement but they got out, unhurt.

Other places hit were the Royal Arcade, Sloane Square and Bruton street, all in the center of the capital.

To this nation of shopkeepers this was a hard blow. These were the streets where the rich bought the finest products of the empire and the poor went window shopping. Rich and poor, alike, crowd these streets, and they all looked pretty sad. Tuesday afternoon watching from behind barricades as carpenters boarded up windows.

Some shops tried to do business but this was only a gesture of defiance for nobody is in a buying mood these days.

Every day that goes by complicates the life of shopkeepers. People are thinking of life and death these days. They are not worrying very much about the number of buttons Saville row will put on dinner jackets this fall. More than that they are concentrating on trying to get home nights. They have little enough time to buy essentials, let alone to do any fancy shopping.

Gradually London must become an armed camp. There is no time now to move war industries from the London area. People who work in the munitions industries and airplane factories, those who sell food, clothing and other essentials, those who run buffets, subways, lighting plants and gas waterworks, will have to remain in this armed camp and fight.

The fight gives every indication of developing to such a pitch that nobody will have much time to do anything but look after his job and family.

That means the shopkeepers, especially those dealing in luxuries, will be gradually weeded out, and Monday's bombardment of West End will probably just start the movement.

Vigil Must Be Kept, Churchill Warns

heroes at Buckingham Palace, nor from keeping an appointment with Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair at the air ministry even though the warning of sirens sounded as he drove out from the palace gates.

Churchill had little good news to communicate, but the general effect of his words was to reassure the members of Parliament and the people that Britain was holding her own.

His brief review of the war situation was well received by the members, who appreciated his frankness in warning that neither side has yet used more than a "portion" of its forces and that the danger of an invasion still threatens.

Members Cheer

The premier's assurance that serious inroads were being made upon the enemy's numerical superiority in the air and the calm assurance with which he faced "decision" in the battle for London, evoked cheers.

The prime minister warned, however, that vigilance must not be relaxed even an instant, difficult as it was to keep armed forces and civilian defenders keyed up through a long period of inactivity.

At the same time, Churchill said heavy damage had been inflicted on the enemy by British raiders in nightly attacks on concentrations of ships and on assemblies of troops. He said he could assure the House that this nation's strength was developing steadily by land and sea, and "above all, in the air."

During the first half of September, Churchill disclosed, 2,000 civilians were killed—men, women and children—8,000 were injured in the air bombardment and of these, he said, four-fifths were Londoners.

R.A.F. Hunts Signs Of New Nazi Bases

Keeps Watch on Channel Shore for Shift in Forces

By James MacDonald.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 17.—Royal Air Force daylight raids on half a dozen German invasion bases and significant reconnaissance flights searching the enemy shoreline in an effort to uncover any sudden changes in the disposition of Hitler's sea forces, were announced by the air ministry today.

The same bad weather that prevented the R. A. F. last night from bombing enemy objectives apparently proved troublesome to the Germans. A westerly wind howled with full force in some of the exposed places where the Germans last have been sighted. The air ministry said that most of the Channel was very rough and that vessels lying at their accustomed anchorages had scurried to more protected points for shelter.

Although R. A. F. attack bombers did not carry out any raids last night, during the daylight of yesterday before severe weather sprung up, giving the continent a protective blanket against British aerial attacks, R. A. F. fliers once more hurled a flaming barrier in the way of nay German invasion.

Bomb Barges, Docks

They bombed Veere on the Dutch island of Walcheren; Calais, Ostend, Dunkerque and Zeebrugge, according to the air ministry.

In each of these ports, the British said, the principal targets were barges, shipping, canal locks and docks.

Beginning at dawn this morning and for many hours thereafter, the coastal command spotting planes roared over the entire Channel area ferreting out possible new danger points from which German strategists might be planning to fling land and sea forces against Britain.

British officials did not disclose whether they know for a certainty that the Germans have been shifting their invasion forces. They let the fact speak for itself that coastal command planes had spent much of their time today seeking signs of any such changes.

The now familiar places where it is common knowledge that the Germans have been concentrating troop-carrying barges, supply ships and other forces, have been undergoing heavy bombing attacks, night after night, by the R. A. F., and it is considered by unofficial observers obvious that a German move would be to divert their invasion forces elsewhere.

[Diplomatic reports reached London of great concentrations of German troops in northern Norway, perhaps for an assault on the British Isles from that direction, the United Press said.

[German forces north of Trondheim on the Norwegian coast, estimated at no more than 20,000 until a few days ago, were said here to have been increased to between 50,000 and 100,000 troops.]

Breakers Lash Beaches

Meanwhile, along the Channel coast, where popular opinion supposes the invasion will come—though there are many other places where the Germans could launch an attack—the winds still howled and breakers lashed along the beaches.

Britishers are already beginning to cite that famous inscription on the medal struck to commemorate the destruction of the Spanish armada: "God sent forth his breath, and they are scattered" (afflavit deus et dissipantur). One news agency even trotted out Neville Chamberlain's remark, "Hitler missed the bus"—first made on the eve of the successful Nazi campaign against Holland, Belgium and France.

It is all very well to make tide tables, and erect beautiful theories showing that the invasion danger is over. The facts are that the right conditions of moon and tide are vanishing quickly.

No amount optimistic stories pumped out from Dover or anywhere else by the British press is going to change the cruel facts of warfare—and the war cabinet knows it.

Sidelights of Defense

Navy to Build Mosquito Boats For Pacific Coast, Knox Reveals

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 17 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, expressed satisfaction with the progress of the national defense program on the Pacific Coast and told briefly of plans to build a fleet of "mosquito" boats for the West Coast.

KNOX

"I suppose it need not be a secret that a flotilla of small, fast torpedo boats will be built for this area," he said in an interview on arrival from San Diego.

"Their construction will be in line with the modern refinements of our national defense program, which is progressing in a highly satisfactory manner on the Pacific Coast.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 17 (U.P.). A mysterious, telephoned warning that the Remington Arms Co. would be "blown up today" led tonight to extraordinary precautions to protect the plant and the $700,000 order for rifle and machine gun cartridges it is turning out for United States defense.

A special detail of more than 20 local officers took up posts around the plant, one of the largest in the country, and the company called in all its guards on a 24-hour basis.

The present force of 80 private police was expected to be increased to 200.

The telephoned warning was received at 2 a. m. at a Brooklyn (N. Y.) police station. The caller refused to give his name.

Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, announced yesterday that at a Dies sub-committee hearing scheduled for September 23, "investigator findings" would be disclosed on the recent Hercules Powder plant explosion at Kenvil, N. J. The hearing is to be at Newark.

One phase of the Kenvil matter is more than unusual, Thomas told newsmen after a conference with Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, another Dies committeeman, and several committee investigators.

Thomas predicted that the hearing would disclose marked inroads by Fifth Columnists in the New Jersey-Pennsylvania area.

Gastonia, N. C., Sept. 17 (AP).—Clyde Stewart, Gastonia mechanic, said today he would go to Springfield, Mass., next week-end at the request of Army technicians to demonstrate the working model of a new multi-firing machine gun he has developed for defense against dive bombers.

Stewart, while withholding details of the weapon, said it was a "pepper-box" machine gun, capable of firing a spray of 30 or more bullets simultaneously at low-flying bombers while its center barrel is firing tracer bullets for target location at night.

Roosevelt Attends Bankhead's Funeral

Thousands Join In Last Tribute To House Speaker

By the Associated Press

Jasper, Ala., Sept. 17.—President Roosevelt, a host of national leaders and thousands of humble folk joined in paying final tribute today to Speaker William B. Bankhead in this little north Alabama community.

The President, six members of his Cabinet and nearly 100 Congressmen sat with the Speaker's family and close home-town friends in the First Methodist Church, where funeral services were conducted for the veteran political leader.

They were only a small part of the great throng here for the funeral. Thousands of townspeople who kept Bankhead in Congress more than 23 years stood with bared heads about the public square listening to the services over loud speakers.

To hundreds of those gathered for the services, the late Speaker was known familiarly as "Mr. Will." Many of them had known him since he was a young lawyer in partnership with his brother, John H. Bankhead, now United States Senator, with whom the Congressman opened law offices here in 1900.

The 66-year-old Speaker, who died early Sunday of a ruptured abdominal artery, was first elected to the "War Congress" of 1917-1918.

Dr. T. L. McDonald, pastor, conducted the services in the little white stone church where the Speaker had been a member for many years. Jasper is in mourning, its municipal offices and many business houses closed for the day.

In the church, to the left of the pulpit and above where the President and other dignitaries sat, a row was reserved for the seven colored servants in the Bankhead household. They had already called at the church as the body lay in state from noon until 2 o'clock, and they followed to the cemetery 2 miles from town where the Speaker was buried beside his father and mother.

The President sat at the end of the second row, in the same seat used yesterday for a brief prayer offered by a mechanic who came from New Orleans on his "off day" to pay his respects to "Mr. Will." Mr. Roosevelt boarded his special train shortly after the services for the return trip to Washington.

McNary to Open Drive Saturday

ment" charges aimed at the Republican party by Democratic Vice Presidential nominee Henry A. Wallace.

McNary, his party's foremost agricultural spokesman, will not confine himself to the farm problem in this speech, friends said. While Willkie is skirting the Pacific coast on his transcontinental campaign tour, his running mate will strike in this Mid West town of 46,000 on "the New Deal's capacity to govern" and his conception of the farm and business problems awaiting solution. Plans were being made to broadcast the speech over a nation-wide hookup.

Plans No Barnstorming

With Willkie and McNary both in action, Wallace busily cultivating the Mid-West's rich political topsoil, and the President ready if need be to strike another "political" blow for his party, the campaign is moving into high gear for the first time.

McNary's trip to Aurora—Fox River Valley agricultural and dairy community 50 miles from Chicago—will be the first of several sorties out of Washington by the Republican Vice Presidential nominee.

But McNary is planning no barnstorming tours and the remaining speeches he will make will be limited—four or five. Party leaders are urging him now to make one of these in the East, using his labor record as a springboard for an answer to the President's recent labor speech.

May Talk on Utilities

Two other of his speeches may be confined largely to farm problems and the two-price system he has consistently advocated; another may discuss the power question (he approved in his acceptance speech continued Federal development of hydroelectric power); in another he will resume his attack on the reciprocal trade program, and in a fifth he may discuss such Western problems as reclamation.

But the burden of Republican campaign speech-making will continue to fall on Willkie, which party leaders here say is as it should be. They expressed satisfaction that Willkie's campaign across the West was making votes.

Such differences in viewpoint as exist between Willkie and McNary and Congressional Republicans on some major issues, top-ranking party officials said, was "healthy" and would help, not hurt, the ticket. These generally feel that the third term and National defense are the two crucial issues, and the war's progress abroad may affect the public's reaction to both.

Decision to send McNary again into the fray against his personal friend but political foe, Henry Wallace, accompanied running fire by Willkie himself at the Wallace "appeasement" charges.

Wallace charged that Republican leaders, by attacking the President's program, were unconsciously and unintentionally "giving aid and comfort to Hitler."

Willkie retaliated Monday by calling Mr. Roosevelt "godfather" of the Munich conference "at which the word 'appeasement' which Henry Wallace likes so much was born."

McNary was expected to reply in more detail to the Wallace attack, which leaders here called "the most vulnerable" in the Democratic vote drive.

The Republican National Committee meanwhile announced that Willkie's Los Angeles speech tomorrow will be broadcast over the National Broadcasting Co.'s red network from 11 to 11:30 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Senate May Vote Today on Bond Tax

Minority Report Denounces Proposal As Unconstitutional

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In a vigorously worded minority report, a Republican and a Democratic Senater yesterday joined hands to denounce as unconstitutional the proposal to abolish Federal tax exemption for income derived from future issues of State and local securities.

The measure, in the form of an amendement to the pending excess profits tax bill, will be debated and possibly voted on in the Senate today. In addition to removing tax exemption from future State and local bonds, it would affect future Federal issues by making their income subject to taxation by both Federal and State governments.

Sponsored by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman of a special Senate committee named last year to study the subject, the proposal is given some chance of Senate passage, but faces almost certain death when the tax bill goes to conference with the House.

"Would Subordinate the State"

The minority report, signed by Senators Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, concentrated its fire on the effects of Federal taxation on income from State and local securities.

Describing the political consequences of the measure as "shocking," the two Senators declared that "it would subordinate the States to an all-powerful central government."

"Whether or not the supreme power to tax the States is the power to destroy them," they said, "it is most definitely and certainly the power to control them."

Besides being "unconstitutional," the measure is "'fiscally, economically and socially unsound," the minority report added, and would be "an unwarranted Federal interference with local financial affairs."

Denying that State and municipal securities have formed to any great extent "a haven of tax refuge for the wealthy," Senators Austin and Burke said the tax would yield the Treasury from $70,000,000 to $120,000,000 annually—and would cost the States and municipalities in higher interest rates "a minimum of $113,000,000 annually."

Held Burden on Real Estate

"In the final analysis," said the report, "the burden would be piled on to real estate owners."

Aside from the Brown proposal, the only other major amendment pending is the war-profits levy sponsored by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, which would impose very high rates in case of hostilities.

Senators on the Finance Committee yesterday expressed the hope that, under the debate limitation the Senate agreed upon last week, the bill might be passed by tomorrow night, and might be reported back from conference with the House on Monday or Tuesday.

However, it was conceded that the conference might be prolonged beyond expectations if House conferes refuse to accept some of the important Senate changes in the bill such as elevation of the normal corporation tax and abolition of certain "penalty taxes." The Treasury already has withdrawn its support from the bill in its persent form.

Heavy Seas Block Rescue of 30 Men

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Quebec, Sept. 17 (AP).—Heavy seas breaking over the stranded British freighter Incemore tonight prevented rescue of 30 crewmen after 15 had been safely brought off.

The 4,098-ton ship lay broadside to the shore at the foot of precipitous cliffs. The men who got ashore after hours spent in making fast a line said the ship was taking water and was in a precarious position.

Willkie Crusades Against 'Indispensable Man' in South

arianism is the continuation in office of one man."

Willkie, still hammering away at the doctrine of the indispensable man, brought cheers when he told the crowd here: "If you elect President Roosevelt for 12 years, you not only elect him, but you reappoint the Tommy Corcorans and the Benny Cohens and the rest of that brain trust gang that have been throwing monkey wrenches in the machinery of the United States Government and piling up a debt of $25,000,000,000.

He declared that if anybody could give him a good argument for a third term he could take it and make of it a better argument for a fourth or fifth term.

The one-time Democrat who now heads the Republican ticket of 1940 made a lot of friends as he journeyed through the Southwest. He hoped he made some votes, but he was not counting too heavily on carrying Texas and New Mexico. Incidentally, neither he nor any of the other speakers mentioned Vice President John Nance Garner during the stops in Texas.

Willkie will spend the night here and then fly to Phoenix, Ariz., tomorrow, after which he will head for the politically vital State of California.

The former Democrat who now heads the 1940 Republican ticket was the first Presidential candidate of either party ever to campaign in the Texas Panhandle.

In Amarillo, a cattle, wheat and helium center, he encountered a few cries of "We want Roosevelt" and some occasional boos from high school boys, but he also evoked enthusiastic applause as he derided the "indispensable man" assertions.

A decided change has come over the Hoosier nominee in the last couple of days, and it is the talk of the campaign train. On the way down through Illinois, he was like a fighter who rushed out of his corner at the bell determined to end the fight in the first round. He tore into the unresponding man in the White House with such violence and rashness that he lost his voice and caused keen disappointment to audiences that had hoped to hear him in parts of Illinois and Iowa.

A flood of telegrams descended on the campaign train, some of them from Washington. They implored Willkie to take it easy, to guard against rashness. These messages together with the loss of his voice, the enforced quietude at Kansas City, and his own common sense seem to have produced the change.

He is less grim and truculent now, and although his message is pretty much the same he delivers it in the form of an appeal rather than an excoriation. There is more satire in his speeches, too, and the result is much raucous laughter at the expense of the indispensable man as Willkie invariably calls the President.

In Amarillo, the first stop this morning, Willkie spoke from a stand flanked by Old Glory and the Lone Star flag of Texas, a bevy of pretty cowgirls formed an escort for Mrs. Willkie. Hundreds of men in sombreros stood waiting to hear the crusader.

He was introduced by Capt. Mike Hogg, son of the late Gov. James Stephen Hogg, of Texas. Capt. Mike heads the no-third-term Democrats of Texas who are called Willkiecrats by the faithful.

"Our country is in danger," Capt. Hogg said, "but the danger from within is more immediate and more insidious than that from without. We find our country being bombed by fear, a fear deliberately manufactured by that small group in power for the purpose of keeping themselves."

He referred to President Roosevelt's "nonpolitical" speech in the Smoky Mountains and Henry Wallace's "war-mongering acceptance speech" at Des Moines and said "these fear tactics of this billion-dollar political machine make the danger of being frightened and stampeded into this third-term humbuggery more imminent than is the danger of invasion."

Willkie told the crowd that he was sympathetic with the things that caused the South to be traditionally Democratic, the excesses of the Federal carpet baggers and the like.

"But," he said, "the people of the South today are faced with a conflict of traditions. In order to maintain that 80-year-old tradition of voting Democratic in 1940 they must abandon another tradition, a tradition that is theirs, a tradition that belongs to the entire country, a tradition that is the very essence of democracy.

"So I put it to you very frankly, people of the Southland. You have two traditions. There is a complete conflict between them and you must measure which you hold the most sacred. If they were petty traditions, rather than great traditions, and if they had no other merit except this point, then I would be discussing with you purely an academic question, and the continuation of the old-fashioned way just for the sake of being old fashioned.

But the only difference between this great democracy of ours, the last untouched democracy in the world, and totalitarianism, is the continuation in office of one man. Germany found the indispensable man, Italy found the indispensable man, Russia found the indispensable man, and where is their democracy? If there was ever a time in the history of democracy when we should preserve all of its forms and all of its traditions, it is now.

"There is no logical argument that can be advanced for a third term that cannot be, with more forcefulness used for a fourth term, and likewise for five terms and for six terms, and so on. And the people, every liberty loving people, in the world who have lost their democracy and their liberty have lost it because one man said, 'I am indispensable. I am indispensable.'"

Once Willkie asked the crowd if it believed there was an indispensable man, and a loud boo was the answer. "Who do you want for your spokesman?" Willkie asked.

The crowd did not let him finish. "We want Willkie," some yelled. "We want Roosevelt," cried others.

Willkie was trying to say that President Roosevelt's spokesman in this campaign was "Boss" Flynn, of the Bronx. Flynn's name and the names of "Boss Hague" and "Boss Kelly" brought more boos.

In a subsequent stop at Clovis, N. Mex., Willkie was presented with a pair of cowboy boots.

"I am going to need these," he said, "to wade through the mud the New Deal has created in the last seven years."

After another attack on the "indispensable" man and the President's talk about not wanting a third term, Willkie got a cheer when he said:

"Look me over. I want your votes. I wasn't drafted. I am fighting for this office."

Willkie announced in the day that he would make a speech on foreign affairs in Los Angeles on Thursday night. It will be broadcast on a coast-to-coast hookup, and will be heard in Washington, D. C., at 11 p. m.

Josh Lee Joshes Willkie, Charges He's a Copy-Cat

Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, last nightt raced New Deal measures he said had been copied in the platform of Wendell Willkie and denounced the G. O. P. candidate jestingly at the National Women's Democratic Club.

"Keep Roosevelt in the White House and Willkie in the power house," he urged.

"Now that the Democratic Party's best speaker has regained his voice we can relax," he continued.

"Willkie went all right in Chicago where they have a lot of ticker tape . . . but he won't find much ticker tape in Texas and Oklahoma," the Senator declared in conclusion.

D. C. to Seek School Aid in Registration

Board to Be Asked Today to Assign Teachers for Oct. 16

The District Commissioners are expected to request the Board of Education today to assign public school teachers to handle registration of Washington's draft-age men and to declare a school holiday on registration day, October 16.

A force of approximately 2,300 persons must be assembled to handle the registration machinery, officials estimated yesterday, but the task of assembling them and of selecting about 400 volunteers for operation of the draft last night awaited revision of regulations by the War Department.

The first two of six volumes of regulations covering organization and registration are expected to be ready Friday and to authorize establishment of local registration areas for every 4,500 registrants.

Provisional regulations provided 4,500 and 3,000 registrants as the basis for establishment of areas, but, it was learned, the confusion of formulas has been called to the attention of the War Department and eliminated from the final draft.

Machinery to Be Overhauled

Change of the draft age limits to include men 35 years old will necessitate considerable overhauling of the draft machinery set up for Washington early this month, officials said yesterday.

The original plan divided the city into 19 registration areas with two registration stations in as many school buildings in each area. The city will have to be repartitioned, officials said, to create additional areas. The number of areas to be added has not yet been definitely determined, but the total is expected to be about 23.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the National Guard and selective service executive, estimated that about 100 registrars will be required in each area. He said the War Department has estimated it will require an average of 15 minutes to register each prospective draftee.

Paid Clerks to Be Limited

Of the approximately 400 persons who will operate the selective service machinery, as distinguished from the registration organization, only a small number of clerks will be paid, Gen. Cox emphasized. The volunteers will include three-man draft boards in each area, an advisory board of from five to seven members and a staff for draft headquarters to be set up in the National Guard Armory.

Col. Charles A. Dravo, adjutant general of the District Guard, was appointed yesterday as assistant draft executive. At the same time Capt. G. Tinsley Garnett, son of Leslie Garnett, former United States district attorney, was named to function as liaison officer between the local organization and the War Department.

Gen. Cox said several members of his staff would be called to active duty to aid in draft supervision. Other assistants, including a medical examiner, will be named shortly.

Cox Sees School Official

Gen. Cox conferred yesterday with Dr. Chester W. Holmes and Robert L. Haycock, assistant school superintendents, and Maj. Beverly C. Snow, assistant District Engineer Commissioner, on changes in the original draft plan which was based on registration of men from 21 to 30 years old.

Men absent from the city on registration day, Gen. Cox said, will register in localities in which they are visiting.

The Washington Board of Trade, in a letter to Gen. Cox from its president, James E. Colliflower, yesterday declared it "would be very happy to have the opportunity of cooperating in any way you believe will be desirable."

The Political Arena

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—While admitting that "I am no lover of the third term," Miss Mary Dewson, former vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, announced today she was coming out of retirement to work for the reelection of President Roosevelt.

Miss Dewson

Miss Dewson explained in an interview at Democratic headquarters that she felt the critical foreign situation overbalanced the third term aspect of the campaign.

She said her misgivings about the third term were overcome when she weighed them against what she termed "the lack of experience" of Wendell L. Willkie.

Miss Dewson, now 67, retired to her home in Castine, Me., after resigning from the Social Security Board in 1938.

Cleveland, Sept. 17 (AP).—The International Association of Machinists (A. F. of L.) today voted unanimously to support President Roosevelt for reelection. The union supported the late Robert M. La Follette in 1924 and President Roosevelt in 1936.

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, announced yesterday that the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee was "examining considerable evidence of double and even triple voting by persons in Philadelphia" and nearby areas of New Jersey and Delaware.

The Senator said David Davidowitz, a Philadelphia Democrat, filed a mass of material in support of charges "against the Republican-controlled Philadelphia registration commission."

"Documentary evidence indicates that some persons have voted in Philadelphia, crossed and voted in Camden and other New Jersey points, and then voted at Wilmington, Del.," Gillette said.

"There is considerable evidence that people of standing are registered as voters in Philadelphia and have cottages in New Jersey seacoast resorts, where they also vote," he added.

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., the Republican National Chairman, believes his party will gain at least 60 and possibly 75 seats in the House of Representatives this fall.

"The trend is definitely our way," he said at a press conference.

Martin said the trend toward the Republican Party started in 1938 when the G. O. P. gained 81 House seats, eight Senators and a number of Governors.

"In 1938," he continued, "outside the solid South, the Republican Party was the majority party of the country. It showed again in off-year elections in 1939 and further demonstrated itself in the Maine election.

73 'Dollar-a-Year' Men Assist Defense Board

American industry has been furnishing the nation manpower since May under its own self-imposed system of selective service.

In line with President Roosevelt's plea for national unity, 73 business executives are now serving with the Defense Commission at the uniform salary of $1 per year.

Successors to the hundreds of "dollar-a-year men" who entered Government service in 1917, these business men, most of them highly paid in their own concerns, have been advising the seven-man commission on the manifold technical problems involved in rearming America.

The Defense Commissioners, who are working without compensation, are: Ralph Budd, who was chairman of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, now handling all transportation problems; Leon Henderson, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who watches price trends; Sidney Hillman, former president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, in charge of employment and training problems; William S. Knudsen, who was president of General Motors Corp., directing industrial production; Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the U. S. Hearing Deferred On Southeast Transit Facilities

Public hearings on transit services in the District area east of the Anacostia River were again postponed yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission. The new date is October 1.

The service, provided by the Capital Transit Co. and the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines, has been described by the commission as "inadequate."

The original hearing was set for August 22 and later changed to September 18.

At a preliminary hearing held in April, the commission decided the service was inadequate and ordered a further hearing on the matter. The commission at that time stated the existing operations of the two companies do not reach certain sections of Southeast Washington which have developed rapidly in recent years and are continuing to do so.

Vital War Plants Safe, British Say

Nazi Raids Inflict Damage Mostly To Civilian Property

By Wallace Carroll
United Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 17. — Confidential reports of the British ministry of home security indicated tonight that furious German aerial bombardment through ten days and nights has inflicted severe damage and suffering on London, but has left Britain's war machinery as a whole unimpaired.

I was allowed to examine these reports and write freely about them on the sole condition that I give no details which would be helpful to the German air force.

They gave an account of the damage to airdromes, aircraft factories, docks, railways, power stations and oil installations.

Damage Only "Flea Bite"

The aircraft industry has "hardly been scratched," they said. Oil stores destroyed were said to be only a "flea-bite" on Britain's reserves.

No power station has been put out of action, but one gas works has been disabled.

Most of London's railroad stations are operating normally but some services of others have been suspended.

Ships continue to move in and out of the Port of London.

These and other assertions contained in the reports correspond to my own exceptional opportunity to inspect airdromes, factories and other military objectives.

Reviewing the effects of the past fortnight's raids, the reports drew these conclusions:

1. The Germans have abandoned their earlier policy of attacking airdromes to gain supremacy of the air. Instead they have concentrated on the bombardment of London with the object of crippling docks and railway communications.

"All Aims Defeated"

2. The Germans in daylight raids, however, have continued to pursue their aim of wearing down British fighter defenses.

3. Indiscriminate bombing of residential districts indicated that the Germans also are trying to damage civilian morale.

4. All these aims have been defeated. Serious damage has been inflicted on London, also much suffering, but the nation's determination to withstand bombardment has been proved.

The reports estimated that the Germans used 700 or more planes in daylight raids on some days. Usually they used 200 planes in the night attacks.

The principal objectives of the daylight raids were the London dock area, oil installations along the Thames Estuary, and southeast England's airdromes and factories.

At night the raiders attacked docks, railways and other lines of communication, particularly at London.

"Morale Is Good"

Comparing the past fortnight's raids to previous raids, the reports drew attention ot a fact which they described as significant. It was that when the Germans opened the large scale raids on London their activity in the rest of the country diminished.

This probably is an indication that the German air force is not numerically strong enough to make heavy attacks on London and maintain the previous scale of attacks on the Midlands and other industrial areas.

The rtports showed that a dozen or more factories suffered major damage. They added, however, that the factories previously damaged in the Midlands have resumed normal production.

The reports concluded that morale is good and that civil defense services are functioning "magnificently."

Legion Chief Fears Hysteria Is Path to War

Mission of Americans Is to Fight Panic, Kelly Tells Bostonians

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 17.—Raymond J. Kelly, of Detroit, national commander of the American Legion, asserted today there was no more important mission for American citizens than to combat "war hysteria . . . which in the end most likely may lead us into conflict."

Addresing the Boston Advertising Club, shortly after arriving for next week's twenty-second national convention of the Legion, Kelly said "the sound policy for our country is to strengthen our national defenses to the utmost, and as efficiently and expeditiously as possible."

"The growth since late last spring of a spirit of fatality of pre-destination on our part as a people to enter this war, is the very national factor most likely to plunge us into the holocaust," Kelly said.

He said the "virtual conquest of nearly all Europe by a ruthless and superbly organized military machine, has caused a national fear, bordering on panic" in this country within a few months.

Later, in an interview, Kelly said the "Fifth Column" was more dangerous than any mechanized division on a battlefield.

Temporary national headquarters announced at least 1,447 delegates would attend the convention—a new high.

New York will send the largest delegation, numbering 102, while 99 will come from Illinois and 82 from Pennsylvania. Canada, Mexico, Panama and the Philippine Islands will send six each.

Although the convention will be called to order formally Monday morning, the week-end will see plenty of Legion activity. The national commander will lead several thousand members into North Square Sunday afternoon to participate in the dedication of a bronze equestrian statue of Paul Revere.

Britain Again Wants U.S. Ships

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 17.—Britain's reentry into the American shipping market to purchase freighters of 8,000 dead-weight tons was announced today following indications from censor-bound Europe of huge shipping losses during recent air raids.

The picture of destruction, pieced together from European reports and information reaching New York Maratime offices, showed both England and Germany as sufferers.

Britain's need for additional ships was revealed by a member of the British purchasing commission who said:

"We are in the market again. We've been out of it for two or three months. We're looking for freighters, about 8,000 dead-weight tons."

The extent of British losses was hinted at in the Admirality report for the week ended September 9 when it said listed losses did not include tonnage sunk by air attacks September 7, 8 and 9, because "full details of such attacks are not yet available."

The report listed a loss of 54,547 tons, slightly above the average—53,900 a week—for the previous 52 weeks of the war.

The Admiralty said that "the Germans claimed to have sunk a total of 188,500 tons "during this same period.

According to the Admiralty, losses consisted of 10 British ships totaling 28,200 tons; four "Allied" ships totaling 18,499 tons and two neutral ships totaling 7,848 tons.

Charles Jeddlica, editor of the New York Maritime Register, said he had heard German shipping losses in the Norwegian campaign had been tremendous. Little of this loss has been acknowledged officially.

Associated Press records, which include only verified losses, show 900 ships totaling 3,321,164 tons have been destroyed.

Text of Churchill's War Report

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 17.—Following is the text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement to Commons today:

I do not feel it necessary to make any lengthy statement to the House today upon the general war position. Practically all the facts that are not of a secret nature have already been made public. The advance of the Italian army from Libya is in progress. The two British platoons which have been holding Salum have been withdrawn. Sharp fighting is taking place upon the desert flanks between the armored vehicle, but the enemy is still at some distance from our position of resistance. We must see what happens.

The deployment of the German barges and ships in preparation of invasion of Great Britain and Ireland continues steadily and we must expect that Hitler will make the attempt at what he judges to be the best opportunity. All our preparations must therefore be maintained in a state of vigilance.

The process of waiting, keyed up to concert pitch day after day, is apt in time to lose the charm of novelty. There is no doubt it imposes a heavy strain on all concerned, but we must also not underrate the damage inflicted upon the enemy by the very heavy and prolonged nightly bombing upon his concentration of shipping and upon all focal points of his assembly of troops.

Undoubtedly serious injury has been done to his ships and barges and meanwhile our own strength, I am able to assure the House, develops steadily by land, by sea, and, above all, in the air.

Sunday's action was the most brilliant and fruitful of any fought upon a large scale by fighters of the Royal Air Force up to the present. The figures have already been made public. To the best of my belief—and I have made searching inquiries and several cross-checks—they are not in any way exaggerated. Neither side has yet employed more than a portion of its forces, but there are good reasons for believing at the present time that very grievous inroads are being made upon the enemy's superiority of numbers, and that we may await the decision of the prolonged air battle with sober but increasing confidence.

The German attacks upon the civil population have been concentrated mainly upon London in the hopes of terrorizing the citizens into submission or to throw them into confusion and also in the silly idea that they will put pressure upon the government to make peace. (Laughter.)

Opposite Effect

The deliberate and repeated attacks upon Buckingham Palace and upon the persons of our beloved King and Queen are also intended, apart from their general barbarity, to have an upsetting effect upon public opinion. They have, of course, the opposite effect. They unite the King and Queen to their people by new and sacred bonds of common danger and they steel all hearts to the stern and unrelenting prosecution of the war with so foul a foe.

I gave the House, when I last addressed them, the casualty figures up to the end of August and, without prejudice to our habit of publishing the figures monthly, I may now mention that during the first half of September about 2,000 civilians, men, women and children, have been killed, and about 8,000 wounded by air bombardment. About four-fifths of these casualties have been in London.

Many hospitals and churches and public monuments have been damaged but the injury to our war-making capacity has been surprisingly small. We are only now beginning to get the increased flow of production from the great programs started on the outbreak of the war and it is very agreeable to see that the increases are maintained over so wide a field in spite of the enemy fire.

Praise for Services

To show how indiscriminate and wanton is the enemy's attack one has only to compare the figures of civilian and military casualties in the first fortnight of September. There were, as I have said, 10,000 civilian casualties from air attack, but only some 250 of these occurred in all the fighting forces.

The air raid precautions organization in all its branches has proved its efficiency and the greatest discipline and devotion has been shown by all. The fire brigades are, of course, conspicuous, but in paying tribute to them there must be no disparagements of all the other forms of service which have been faithfully and punctiliously discharged.

Of course, the task of preserving the health and well-being of this enormous community in the Thames Valley, exceeding 8,000,000 souls, living under artificial conditions of scientific civilization, and of supplying them with food and all other necessities and of making provision for those whose homes have been destroyed or who have had to be evacuated—all this must, as the House will realize, have cast a strain on the machinery of government which calls for ceaseless exertion by all the authorities concerned.

I am glad to say that this heavy and intricate task is being efficiently and successfully discharged and our whole system of life and labor is being rapidly adapted to conditions hitherto unknown to modern society. Constant adjustments have to be made and defects remedied in the lighth of experience.

As I said last time a great deal of our progress must be by trial and error. We have to feel our way and do our best to meet each difficulty as it reveals itself. I had hoped, as I told the House during the week that has passed, to promulgate some new rules about air raid warnings, but the intensification of the air attack has made it difficult to draw precise conclusions as to new rules and it is wiser for the moment to allow the process of local adaptation to work a little longer.

Espies a Stranger

Broadly speaking, our plan must be to use the siren, which it may be noticed has been cut in half, as an "alert" and not as an alarm and to have a system of local and highly trained "Jim Crows" or lookout men who will give the alarm when immediate danger is expected at any point. Upon this basis, everyone must endeavor to carry on his work and see that output and the public service do not suffer or suffer only the minimum interruption.

There are some matters connected with our arrangements under air attack which I should prefer to discuss in private. I must remind the House that every word spoken in public session can be telegraphed all over the world and that there is no reason why we should keep the enemy informed of the details of our arrangements and thus enable him to inflict the maximum injury upon us. We do not receive any similar information from him about his way of life, though I am sure our military staffs would be very much convenienced thereby.

There are several things I wish to say to the House and I daresay there are several things that members would like to say to the government. I therefore propose that we should now move into secret session and I declare to you, Mr. Speaker, that casting my eyes about, I espy a stranger. (Laughter.)

"SERIAL OPENING." The formal opening of the Old New Orleans will be a serial affair extending over 10 or 12 days, with the first "opening" due September 25. Mrs. Jean Richards, owner of the Old New Orleans, has decided on this novel policy because she doesn't want too much of a crowd on any one evening lest it upset her planned service and menus.

Decoration of the New Orleans Room and the Hunt Room is being speeded along, while the first floor Continental Room of the O. N. R. is already open and doing beautifully, thank you. The Hunt Room, resembling a Virginia "tack room," will be a men's luncheon club between 12 and 2, be the scene of afternoon and evening cocktail dancing later in the day. The New Orleans Room, says Mrs. Richards, "will be as little like a restaurant as possible," be fitted up like one of those ante-bellum homes you saw in "Gone With the Wind."

Remember beauteous Billie Bailey, who sang in the Mayflower Lounge last season? She married Byron E. Wrigley, jr., of the Wrigley chewing gum family, in Sheffield, Mass., on August 31. Announcements have just reached Washington. They're now living in New York.

PARTIES-OF-THE-WEEK. Cosmos Room. The White House party that included former Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, lovely Marguerite Le Hand and others . . . At other tables we saw monocled Decio de Moura, of the Brazilian Embassy, Representative and Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Parisian Mrs. R. B. Bloomingdale, who's back in America after living abroad for years, ecorted by her handsome son, Donald.

Madrillon. The huge and gay Sunday evening wedding party for Mr. and Mrs. Leon K. Davidian, which brought Washington's Armenian group out en force. Mrs. Davidian is the former Miss Margaret Paul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kazan Paul, of Washington.

Metronome Room. The informal, unplanned but overwhelming parties of collegiates that come early, stay late and dance every number played by Grant Thompson's Orchestra. It seems that Metronome is to be undergrad headquarters again in the 1940-41 season.

Casino Royal. The big soiree held by Washington's Chinese colony after closing hours on Monday night. The chefs worked for two days previous in preparing the luxury menu served to a gathering that was all-Oriental with the exception of favorite Washington entertainers.

STYLE BULLETIN. Lasses who dance in the Lounge Riviera are a perfect style barometer. So, mesdames, we can inform you that velveteens are definitely in. A couple of dozen of bright velveteen frocks were flaunted gayly on the Riviera dance floor the other eve.

BARNEE'S GAUCHOS. All caparisoned in rainbow-colored South American costumes are Barnee and his orchestra for the Shoreham's current "Pan-American Week." Aurelia Celinda is whirling in Brazilian, Spanish and Mexican dances. And Harriet Smith's Lovely Ladies have evolved a "hula with South American accents." Vicente del Garza sings the latest numbers from Mexico City, also some fine compositions of his own.

Danny Rangels and his Pan-American Four have just opened in the Hi Hat. They're a spirited crew, play with versatility on flocks of different instruments, bear down especially on the marimba and steel guitar.

TWEET! TWEET! A "Canary Circus," most unusual act you'll ever see, is delighting Lotus crowds this week. Presented by Billy and Irene Burns, it presents cockatoos, love birds and Javanese rice birds, as well as canaries. These cunning birdies do tricks like a regular animal act; ride on tiny aeroplanes and trains, go through flaming hoops. There's even a "clown bird" . . . While you're at the Lotus, don't fail to note the handsome new bandstand decorations.

TROIKA'S SATURDAY LUNCHEONS. Troika will be open regularly for Saturday luncheons. Sasha Lukas and the Meyer Davis orchestra will play and you can dance if you wish. The menu will be studded with Latin American and Russian delicacies. It's a perfect opportunity for the many Washingtonians who set aside Saturday luncheons as a gala start for the week-end.

ABOUT YOUR DIVERSIONISTS. Arthur Todd, of the King Cole Room, is quite the fisherman as well as the golfer and tennist. He does most of his angling at his father's place on Chesapeake Bay . . . Mayfair's "Mousy" Garner tells us that hard-boiled Jimmy Cagney is the most democratic and approachable movie star in Hollywood . . . Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, says that "I Can't Resist You" will presently be in the top hit spot occupied by "I'll Never Smile Again." And Milt's an excellent prophet . . . Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, claims that he gained 23 pounds in a few months after taking up boxing, which he prefers to tennis, golf and baseball, although he plays all three . . . Jack Kerr, of the Cafe Caprice, says that they make the strongest coffee in the world in Rio de Janeiro. It practically knocked him out . . . Evelyn Tyner has cracked all records for long-term engagements at the Neptune Room. It's her glittering piano-personality.

"Fall opening party" of the "Dance Campus" at Boulevard Farms will take place next Saturday. There'll be a Manhattan floor show headed by Dancers Margery and Bouchet, who've appeared in Washington theaters. Dance music by Bert Motley and his Twelve Georgians, who've already registered a corking hit.

SUBURBAN DANCE MUSIC is sweet and sophisticated at Del Rio with Ray Bradford's band . . . Hot but honeyed at the Gay Nineties with Al Oddone's music . . . Bright and swing-y at River Bend under George Stein's baton . . . Strictly streamlined at the Nightingale, where Rodd Raffell goes in for modernistic arranging . . . Completely charming at Maryland Gardens, where Nadine and her pretty Co-Eds hold forth.

AROUND THE CLOCK goes the service at convenient Harrington Tavern. You can get a smoking hot breakfast there in the morning (or after midnight). There are delicious luncheons and pop priced dinners, tasty snacks and well compiled beverages at all hours.

D. C. Schools Urge Boys To Enroll in Cadet Corps

Washington boys will be urged to enroll in the High School Cadet Corps because of "the tense international situation," Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, said last night.

Dr. Holmes, after a long conference with principals of eight District high schools, reported that the faculty military committee at each school will work out its own "recruiting program."

All the schools, however, are likely to stress a threat to American security in their appeal for new enrollments, Dr. Holmes said. The value of the training to those who might seek commissions or posts as noncommissioned officers after they reach draft age will be emphasized, he added.

School officials expect a 50 per cent increase in the corps enrollment for the present year. Total enrollment last year was 2,683.

Methods of facilitating the purchase of uniforms will be left to each school, Dr. Holmes said. He added that there probably will be no effort to arrange with manufacturers for sale on the installment plan. The carrying charges for such an arrangement might increase the cost of uniforms, now $20, he pointed out.

The principals agreed to limit the size of cadet bands to one captain, one drum major and 49 enlisted men, the size of a Regular Army regimental band. Some of the cadet bands now number as many as 75 members. The new limitation will free a number of students for duty with the main body of the cadet corps, Dr. Holmes said.

There is no possibility of obtaining any equipment other than rifles for the cadets, he stated, because of the shortages confronting many Regular Army units.

Indo-China Crisis Near Showdown

Japan Prepares To Remove Nationals As Talks Continue

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 17.—The crisis between Japan and French Indo-China headed swiftly toward a possible explosive showdown tonight and Japanese ships were en route to take out their nationals if necessary.

Japanese Consul General Rokuro Suzuki ordered his people in Indo-China to prepare to leave if impending conferences here further complicate the already badly strained relations.

The talks between Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of a Japanese military mission, and Admiral Jean Decoux, French governor-general, are expected to decide once and for all whether Japan is to gain her ends peaceably or have to fight.

Japan demands troop transit across French Indo-China to enable her to strike at China along Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's vulnerable southern border, and a naval base at Haiphong, strategic port on the Gulf of Tonkin.

France Made Concessions

Tokyo and the Vichy government of Marshal Petain have agreed in principle on the demands. This agreement reportedly provides for limited military concessions, including the landing of Japanese troops at three ports and their transit to the Chinese border.

The French regime was reported prepared to continue the negotiations, but determined to reject the Japanese representations if they were in the form of an ultimatum.

Japanese informants said new instructions arrived from Tokyo Sunday by plane and would be presented Admiral Decoux by Gen. Nishihara at their next conference. Their nature was not disclosed.

[Chunking reports said the Japanese now had increased their demands to include passage for 200,000 troops for the proposed south China invasion, but that the Hanoi regime stood firm in limiting the number to 12,000.

[The British government has made clear to the Japanese government "its interest in maintenance of the status quo in French Indo-China," Lord Caldecote, Dominions secretary, told the House of Lords today.]

France Rejects Siam's Demands

Vichy, France, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Petain government has rejected a demand by the government of Thailand (Siam) for territorial concessions in French Indo-China.

The foreign office, in reply to the Thailand demand, declared that France was "resolved to defend the territorial integrity of Indo-China in all circumstances and against all foreign enterprises."

Thailand presented her demand at Vichy at a time when negotiations for defining the frontier between Indo-China and Thailand were proceeding, a French communique said.

British to Name Destroyers for U. S. Towns

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 17.—The 50 United States destroyers which were turned over to Great Britain will be given names common to towns in both countries.

This was announced by A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, today, and amid cheers from members of the House of Commons he announced the names of the first flotilla, which will presumably reach here fairly soon.

The British destroyer system requires a leader for each flotilla and the leader of the first one will be called "Churchill." This announcement was greeted with loud cheers. Churchill is the name of two villages in England and another in Nevada.

The other destroyers in the first flotilla coming over will be called Caldwell, Cameron, Castleton, Chelsea, Chesterfield, Clare and Campbelltown.

The British always try to name their destroyers with the same initial letter. Presumably they started with "C" because they could use Churchill.

London, Sept. 17 (AP).—Award of the Victoria Cross, highest decoration for bravery at Britain's disposal, to Lieut. Robert Davies and his "suicide squad" of four men who have removed a delayed-action bomb from historic St. Paul's cathedral, was urged today by the News Chronicle.

There was some doubt whether the V. C. could be given in the circumstances, since it is awarded for conspicuous gallantry "in the presence of the enemy." But the News Chronicle observed that "if their action is not gallantry at its most conspicuous, then there is no such quality as bravery."

The Times called the feat of the squad in digging up the bomb, carting it away to the outskirts of the city and exploding it harmlessly "the outstanding deed of heroism so far recorded in the capital."

London, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Rev. J. N. Norton, speaking at the Chester and Warrington Methodist Synod, sugggested today that German bombers were "sparing breweries" of England because "if drinking continues at the present rate we will lose the war."

The synod urged that bars be closed throughout the country at 9 p. m. as an emergency measure.

London, Sept. 17.—Henry B. Clarke, an American, wants to go home.

Unable to book passage on the Pan American clippers from Lisbon, and barred by the United States neutrality law from sailing on a British liner, Clarke has purchased the 160-ton racing yacht Noroit from Earl Beattie, the son of Britain's naval hero of the last war, and is looking for four able-bodied American men to sign on, with a professional British crew, and work the Noroit across the Atlantic.

London, Sept. 17.—Sixty suites of furniture from Windsor Castle have been sent by the Queen to help refurnish wrecked homes in the squalid east end, the scene of London's worst destruction.

The furniture, which the Queen selected herself, includes many fine old pieces in use at the castle since the reign of Queen Victoria. Every suite includes wardrobe, chairs and beds. Large quantities of royal bedding and rugs are also being moved to the devastated areas.

London, Sept. 17 (AP).—Homes in London's fashionable West End are being commandeered for families left homeless in severely bombed areas, billeting officers announced today.

Refugees are sent first to temporary "rest billets"—such as schools and theaters—and then transferred to new homes, most of which thus far have been within the London area.

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 17 (AP).—Two young Frenchmen, believed to be aviators anxious to fight for Britain, were seized by police today as they sought to stow away on the British steamer Highwear, bound for England.

The number of Frenchmen in unoccupied France who favor continuing the fight against Germany under Gen. Charles de Gaulle is increasing, declared Reuters, British news agency.

"The De Gaullists, among whom are many soldiers, hold regular secret meetings in Marseille and other cities," the agency says.

Tangier, Internationalized Zone, Morocco, Sept. 17 (AP).—Daily rioting in Casablanca, French Morocco, between supporters of the Vichy government and of Gen. Charles DeGaulle, leader of the "free French" faction still fighting with Britain, was reported today in usually reliable quarters.

French Moroccan authorities were said to view the situation anxiously and Spanish troops were reported concentrating this week end at all frontier zones.

Calgary, Alta., Sept. 17 (AP).—Ernest Richard Saran, awarded the German iron cross for bravery at Verdun in the World War, now is a lance corporal in the second battalion of Calgary Highlanders in training near here. A resident of Banff, where he is a music instructor, Saran became a naturalized Canadian in 1933 and is married to a Canadian girl.

"As if you gotta string o'comets by the tail!"

Out at the General Motors Proving Ground they judge an automobile by what's under the hood and not by the bright shining paint.

So straight from that plain-talking hard-testing bunch we bring the picture of this new Buick, as you'll get it once you take it out on the road.

THEY liked the size of this SPECIAL, because those trail wise drivers know that roadweight means road steadiness.

They liked the room, softer, steadier ride, the Permi-firm steering — because like you these boys value comfort on the road.

But what they went for was the FIREBALL* Eight.

The new engine under that broad bonnet, still smooth as the down on the pussywillow buds because each is micropoise-balanced after assembly — but now a sockdolagin' son-of-a-seacook for wallop.

"It's as if you gotta string o' comets by the tail," they said — and that's more than just a word-picture.

For in each flame-packed cylinder there is a comet—a twisting, whirling, flaring ball of fire touched off with every spark plug flash. Fuel in this engine is compacted to higher-than-ever compressions, cupped into a flattened ball by new piston-face contours.

Massed around the spark, this fuel is fired from its very heart, burns with sudden, swift completeness that develops 115 horsepower from the same-size engine that last year could give only 107.

It gives you more power when you need it—at low speed or high—and it uses any gasoline of 75 octane rating or better, fuel now available at standard-gasoline prices!

You get this FIREBALL Eight in every '41 Buick, whatever its price.

But you can also get it stepped up still more in power and thrift by Compound Carburetion which gets as much as twenty miles an hour more emergency speed from the same fuel rationing — gives road performance and brilliance far beyond dynamometer power ratings — so increases efficiency that at 40 miles an hour, your engine has more than 85% of its power in reserve.

So do you wonder test drivers talk about comets? And don't you think you ought to find out about the FIREBALL Eight on general principles?

We do—in fact, we wonder how you can wait!

According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super meteor which travels with a series of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."*

Bulgarian Press Attacks Greece

Polemics Believed Preliminary to Revisionist Drive

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Sofia, Sept. 17.—The controlled Bulgarian press today opened its long anticipated attack on Greece, regarded here as a normal preliminary to the revisionist campaign in that direction.

Now that Bulgaria has succeeded in stabilizing her northern frontier at the expense of Rumania, the No. 2 point in her campaign comes to the fore—her demand for an outlet on the Aegean Sea. Bulgarian aspirations involving Yugoslav territory are still held relatively in abeynace.

What Bulgaria wants has been well known ever since the ratification of the Treaty of Neuilly. This country claims the right to a portion of western Thrace, which would include one or more harbors, and which would incidentally divide two of the principal opponents of Bulgarian revisionism—Greece and Turkey—which now have a common frontier.

Axis Backing Foreseen

Official sources said today that formal demands on Greece probably would not be made for some time yet, but now that southern Dobruja has been re-absorbed and the press has been permitted to begin polemics against Bulgaria's southern neighbor, it is probable that theq uestion of an Aagean outlet will soon rank as an important problem in the Balkans.

There is every reason to believe that Italy and Germany will encourage Sofia's demands—when they are officially made—to coincide with the renewed Italian attacks on Greece and the attempts to enlarge Rome's Albanian colony by the absorption of the Tchamuria district of Epirus.

There is a strong conviction in official circles here that Italy plans to invade Greece to strengthen the morale of the Italian people as well as to secure valuable naval bases for the eastern Mediterranean war.

Rumania Asks Nazi Mission

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Sept. 17 (passed by censor).—Premier Gen. Antonescu has asked Germany to send a military mission to Rumania to reorganize her army in accordance with new war methods.

Gen. Tippelskirch, chief of the German military attache service, has arrived in Bucharest to discuss the question.

Previously the German minister and the military and air attaches conferred repeatedly with the Rumanian general staff and this step of Gen. Antonescu has made the best possible impression on the Germans, winning their full confidence for him.

At the same time, Antonescu warned that "both the press and the public must not forget that today Rumania's only ally is the Axis, and consequently the Germans and Italians who live amongst us must be considered and treated as our brothers."

Gen. Antonescu ordered the Rumanian press also to moderate its attitude toward Russia.

IT'S QUITE AN HONOR—Dr. Leon De Bayle (left), Minister from Nicaragua, yesterday presented to Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, a sheet of stamps bearing Dr. Rowe's portrait. The stamps were recently issued by the Nicaraguan government on the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the union. Portraiture on the stamps of a foreign country is an honor shared by only three other living Americans—President Roosevelt; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Col. Lindbergh

London Papers Give America New Slant on Total War

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Sept. 17.—Newspapers published in London only last Saturday and Sunday, which arrived in New York Monday on the British flying boat Clare, provided a many-sided answer today to that question so many millions of neutrals have asked:

"How are the people of the British metropolis standing up under the ceaseless air bombardments?"

It's an even more enlightening answer than that given by foreign correspondents, for where those correspondents are concerned only with the larger picture, the newspapers reflect a hundred and one details of every-day life that aren't considered important enough to warrant cable space or telephone tolls.

No correspondent went to the expense for instance of noting that The Daily Mail took a back-handed slap at invasion rumors in a front-page box on Saturday. That box read:

"Notice to Channel passengers: Dover, Friday, September 13—Sea calm."

On the same day a two-column advertisement, about 12 inches long, advised:

"On air raid nights avoid headaches caused by gunfire noise. Two tablets (or one powder) of Cephos taken on entering an air raid shelter will enable you to avoid a headache."

Sports and horticulture figure in The Mail's news of the day. There is a three-line item saying: "Two 'spotters' for air raids will be employed during today's boxing tournament at Hendon."

There is a garden column solemnly warning:

"Break new ground—and do it now. The enemy wants to destroy us. The spade is one of many goodly weapons in this sort of conflict. Let us wield it mightily."

And there is the advertisement of the National Rose Society, reading:

"Owing to the exigency of the situation, the autumn rose show which was to have been held today at the Horticultural Hall, Westminster, has been canceled."

Advertisements and editorial counsel in The Sunday Dispatch, the Observer, for Sunday; the Sunday Times, the Daily Sketch, the Daily Mirror, the Daily Telegraph, and the Daily Express, all point to one new trend in illnesses—illnesses brought on by air raids.

One editor advises:

"Siren tummy is the latest complaint. It is mild—but a nuisance. . . . There are two ways of dealing with this. If you care to, you can take a mild sedative for the nervous system. Alternatively, you can wait a day or two until you are thoroughly used to the raids—and you will find that the feeling passes off entirely.

Some of the advertisements read: "Defeat din with Aurax ear protectors. Subdue loud noises, but enable you to hear warnings and ordinary conversations."

"Sleep gets broken up nowadays. Millions have to take it in short snatches. How to drop off smoothly and yet be fresh and alert on awakening has puzzled many. Aspro provides the answer."

Tiniest State Ends 25-Year War With Reich, Turns on Britain

By Aldo Forte
United Press Staff Writer

San Marino, San Marino, Sept. 17. This smallest and oldest republic in the world decided today to lop off its 25-year war with Germany and turn the full blast of its belligerence on Britain instead.

The sovereign council of San Marino hoped thus to extricate all 32 square miles of its territory, along with its 14,000 souls, from the "most embarrassing" dilemma of being at war with the Axis partner of Italy, on whose map the venerable republic is but a flyspeck.

The decision to do something about the ugly situation which has persisted since 1915, when San Marino declared war against Germany, resulted from the election by the 60 councilors of two new regents. The new regents, Federico Gozi and Salvatore Foschi, will govern the republic for the next six months and are well-known Italian sympathizers.

As soon as they mentioned it, all within earshot agreed that it did not look right for San Marino to be at war against Germany, which was the same as being at war with the all-enveloping Italy.

Furthermore, the regents pointed out from the balcony of city hall to wildly cheering San Marinans below, their army of 950 soldiers and 39 officers was in splendid fighting condition. Hence it was not only right but desirable that war be declared forthwith on Britain, enemy of Germany and of Italy.

The mountain republic nestled in the heart of central Italy 30 miles from Premier Mussolini's hometown of Forli, went along with Italy when Italy declared war on Germany in 1915. At Versailles, nobody from San Marino showed up. Peace with Germany, alas, never was made.

As soon as they were elected the new regents put their fingers on the nub of the "most embarrassing" position of the republic, noting that it had a treaty of friendship with Italy—Germany's ally—signed in 1897 and revised in 1914.

Primaries Held In Three States

Senator Robert M. La Follette, was unopposed for renomination on the Progressive ticket.

Orland S. Loomis, former State attorney general, led four rivals for the Progressive nomination for Governor.

In the Progressive race for Governor the count from 561 precincts was: Orland S. Loomis, 4,363; Harold E. Stafford, 4,034; Philip E. Nelson, 2,143; Paul R. Alfonsi, 1,856; Henry Gunderson, 1,468.

Left Wing Takes Lead In American Labor

Albany (Wednesday), Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—The left-wing faction of the American Labor Party, opposing a third term for President Roosevelt, held an early lead over right-wingers in yesterday's New York primary, scattered returns showed today.

The left-wing of the Labor Party had entered candidates in more than 125 Congressional and Legislative contests.

Results of the A. L. P. contests are considered significant inasmuch as the Laborites cast nearly 275,000 votes for Mr. Roosevelt in 1936. Should the left-wing faction gain control of the party, some observers believe, the President may lose many of the labor votes in November.

Fish Renominated; Fay Leads O'Connor

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 17 (A.P.)—Veteran Republican "vote-getters" swept aside opposition for nomination to Congress and State Legislature in early returns from today's New York primary election, bolstering party leaders' hopes for a strong ticket in November.

Balloting gave Representative Hamilton Fish overwhelming Republican designation in the Twenty-sixth District despite a "write-in" vote for an unlooked for opponent in protest of the Congressman's effort to attach a 60-day delay clause to the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

Fish, an old New Deal foe, represents President Roosevelt's home county, Dutchess.

Fish, who first went to Washington in 1919, goes on the November ticket with other Republican Congressional veterans, including Frank Crowther, Francis D. Culkin and Harold E. Cluett.

Balloting was light and continued until 8 p. m. up-State and until 9 p. m. in New York City.

The status of the American Labor Party's internal struggle between leftwingers opposing President Roosevelt's reelection and the approving rightwingers remained in doubt long after the polls closed.

Eighty-four of the A. L. P.'s 131 contests occurred in New York City. The party's right wing last weekend nominated electors in support of a third term for Mr. Roosevelt, a move that caused a party wrangle which threatened loss of A. L. P. support that in 1936 gave the President 275,000 votes.

Comeback efforts of former Representative John J. O'Connor failed as far as the Republican nomination was concerned, William T. Pheiffer winning the designation for the Sixteenth District in New York City.

O'Connor, however, also is a contestant on the Democratic ticket, where he is seeking to displace James H. Fay, who two years ago won the nomination from O'Connor with the President's support.

Dever Nominated In Massachusetts

Boston, Sept. 17 (A.P.).—Attorney General Paul A. Dever scored a decisive victory over former Lieut. Gov. Francis E. Kelly in the hotly waged fight for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, chief contest of today's Massachusetts primaries.

Dever was the sole Democratic State-wide officeholder to survive a Republican landslide two years ago.

Returns from 957 precincts out of 1,771 in the State gave Dever 124,338 to 69,372 for Kelly.

In November, Dever will oppose Republican Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, unopposed for renomination, as were all of the other Republican State officials elected in the G. O. P. sweep of the Bay State in 1938.

Senator David I. Walsh was the only Democratic seeker after a major office who was named without opposition. The chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee will be opposed in November by Henry Parkman, former Boston corporation counsel, who stepped into the Republican Senatorial nomination without a party fight.

Six of the 10 Republican Congressmen were unopposed, including Representative Joseph Martin, chairman of the Republican National Committee. Of the five Democratic House members, only Representative Joseph E. Casey, in the third district, was without opposition.

Chest Campaign Leaders to Meet At 4:30 Tomorrow

First fall meeting of the campaign committee which will guide the thirteenth annual Community Chest campaign will be held tomorrow at 4:30 in Chest headquarters, 1101 M street northwest.

The committee will consider the amount needed for the coming year, a keynote of the campaign, adoption of a giver's emblem, and personnel organization of the soliciting units, Chairman Chauncey G. Parker, jr., said yesterday.

Meanwhile, eight Chest-supported settlements are preparing to register an estimated 26,000 Washington youngsters for their fall programs. Southwest House, at 501 Second street southwest, will open the enrollment period by receiving registrations all day tomorrow.

Registration begins today and continues through Friday at the three branches of the Boys' Club of Washington: Southeast, at Massachusetts avenue and Seventeenth; Central, 230 C street northwest, and Georgetown, 2726 M street northwest.

County Welfare Head Faces Forgery Trial

Mathews, Va., Sept. 17 (A.P.).—Carlton B. Hudgins, former Mathews County superintendent of public welfare, will go to trial here Wednesday on the first of four indictments charging him with "unlawful and felonious forgery" during his tenure of office last year.

A circuit court grand jury returned true bills yesterday in four cases charging Hudgins with forgery in connection with endorsement of checks of welfare clients. The four checks involved ranged in amount from $5 to $15.

Airlines to Operate New Route in South

The Pennsylvania Central Airlines yesterday received permission from the Civil Aeronautics Board to begin operation of a new route between Norfolk and Knoxville.

Two daylight round trips will be Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Greensboro, and Asheville, all in North Carolina.

The board cited the importance of military and naval operations in the Norfolk area and difficulties in East-West surface travel through the mountains in granting the P. C. A. application.

Two daylight roundtrips will be operated for the present, according to the airline, pending installation of night flying aids.

A native of Dunkirk, N. Y., he had served for many years in the Labor Department, resigning in 1919 while executive officer in the immigration service. At National University where he graduated in 1912, he taught common law, pleading and torts.

He was a member of the District Bar Association, a Mason, Shriner and Templar.

Court Denies Bergdoll Claim To Clemency

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 17.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World War draft dodger, lost today an appeal to Federal Court, which ruled he must serve the full seven-year sentence imposed by an Army court martial.

A five-year term was imopsed in 1920 after his capture as a deserter, and a two-year sentence was added last year after his return from Germany whence he fled after his first trial.

Judge John C. Knox, in dismissing a writ of habeas corpus, denied Bergdoll's contention that he was entitled to the leniency of a 1916 peace-time order of President Wilson limiting punishment for desertion to 18 months if the deserter had been in service less than six months.

Judge Knox ruled: "The President's right to prescribe limits to punishment of military offenders is confined to times of peace. In times of war, the mandate of Congress, so far as it concerned the right of a court martial to pronounce such judgment as its discretion dictates is the measure of the corut martial's authority."

The "mandate" he referred to was a statute making the punishment for desertion as severe as death.

Last fall, Frank Murphy, then Attorney General, ordered the return to Bergdoll of property appraised at slightly more than $300,000. The appraised value of Bergdoll's property held by the Attorney General was $535,540, but $200,000 was set aside for income taxes that might be owed.

Miss Ruth Eleanor Jones, 51, Washington Society Editor, Dies

Began Newspaper Career Here in 1914; Wrote as Jean Eliot

RUTH E. JONES

Miss Ruth Eleanor Jones, 51, society editor of the Washington Times-Herald, former society editor of The Post and regarded as one of the Nation's best nwspaperwomen, died last night at St. Luke's Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Jones, who wrote under the name of Jean Eliot, was ill before she left Washington last month to join her brother, John Paul Jones, jr., and his family at their summer cottage at Chagrin Falls, on Lake Lucerne, in Ohio.

After their return to her brother's home in Cleveland, Miss Jones became worse and was taken to the hospital, where her death was attributed to a tumor of the brain.

A writer of Washington society news since 1914, Miss Jones had been a close friend of First Ladies, diplomatic hostesses, cabinet members' wives and other society leaders.

Covered Many Important Events

She covered practically every important society event during the period, and scored a number of "scoops," including the engagement of William Gibbs McAdoo to Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the late President.

She was known by members of the working press, from the top executives to the apprentice printer, as a competent journalist.

Frances Parkinson Keyes, in her book, "Capital Kaleidoscope," published four years ago, described Miss Jones as "the outstanding society editor in Washington today, and this is equal to saying the foremost one in the world."

In "The Saga of American Society," published in 1937, Dixon Rector called her "probably the outstanding society editor in America."

Miss Jones was the first Washington society editor to write what is known as a "news story" about society events. Previously, society news consisted of a conglomeration of brief notes.

Former President of Press Club

A member of the National Women's Press Club, she served as its president for two terms, in 1928 and 1929. She also was well known as a bridge player.

Born at 2006 R street northwest, Washington, Miss Jones was a daughter of the late John Paul Jones, a Washington attorney, and the former Elizabeth Davis Gittings, of Baltimore.

On her father's side, she was a great niece of Senator Daniel W. Voorhees, of Indiana. A maternal greatgrandfather was Daniel Rapine, Washington's second mayor.

She was educated at the Misses Kerr's School here and at the Castle School, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y., from which she was graduated in 1907. This was followed by a trip to Europe, on which she saw her brother, a former Cornell University athlete, run in the Olympic games at Stockholm.

Miss Jones became a society reporter on the old Washington Times in February, 1914, and was made society editor less than a year later. In 1928 she left the Times to become society editor of The Post, where she served until 1930, when Mrs. Eleanor Patterson became editor of the Herald and persuaded her to become society editor.

She continued as society editor of the Times-Herald when the papers were combined.

Miss Jones lived here in recent years with her aunt, Miss Eleanor Gittings, at 1245 Twenty-ninth street northwest.

In addition to her aunt and brother, she is survived by a cousin, Miss M. M. Hanan, of Washington; a nephew, John Paul Jones 3d, and two nieces, Mary Lou Jones and Nancy Jones, of Cleveland.

Arrangements for the funeral, expected to be held in Washington, had not been completed last night.

2 Held in Montgomery On Housebreaking

Clarence Edward Thomas was held for action of the Montgomery County grand jury yesterday on two charges, one of larceny and the other of housebreaking. Bond was fixed at $1,000 for each charge by Trial Magistrate Donald A. DeLashmutt in Rockville Police Court.

He is charged with breaking into the Dodson Service Station near Rockville, May 7.

Richard Randolph Sims, charged with burglary of the home of Parker L. Weller, was held for action of the grand jury on $1,000 bond.

American Red Cross Doubles Its Efforts To Aid Beleagured Britain in Month

American Red Cross efforts to aid victims of air raids in Great Britain have more than doubled since the first of this month, Chairman Norman H. Davis said yesterday.

"We already have made arrangements for relief costing about $4,250,000 and daily we are meeting new requests as they are forwarded to us," he added. "We are in constant contact with the British Red Cross and the Women's Voluntary Services and are responding to all their requests for aid.

"Thanks to the generosity of the American public, which oversubscribed our $20,000,000 war fund and to the action of Congress in making available $50,000,000 for certain categories of Europian relief," Davis said, "we are in a position to act promptly and generously on all legitimate requests for British relief.

Have Made 102 Shipments

"Since early July the Red Cross has made 102 shipments of relief supplies in British boats and two by clipper plane." Sixty-six different British steamships have provided free cargo space for the Red Cross relief supplies, and not one of the shipments has been lost at sea or otherwise.

Addressing the central committee of the American Red Cross, Chairman Davis stated that more than 200 different types of relief had been sent to Britain. Beside more than 1,000,000 articles of clothing for men, women and children, shipments have been made of 151 ambulances, 23 motor trucks, 155,000 blankets and large quantities of hospital supplies.

An innovation in medical relief is the sending of blood plasma to the British Red Cross for use in treating wounded soldiers and civilians. In cooperation with Harvard University, a hospital is being established in Salisbury, England, to study and treat communicable diseases under wartime conidtions.

Refugee Homes Helped

About $172,000 of relief supplies has been given since intensification of German air raids on London in the past two weeks, according to the Red Cross chairman. This includes $20,000 granted toward meeting expenses of refugee homes Britain is maintaining in the country for children under five years old and another $20,000 to buy underwear for bombed-out children of London's East End.

Medical supplies included gasoline generators for X-ray machines; operating tables, 50 blood transfusion apparatus, 23 portable X-ray units, 2,000 pairs of surgeon's gloves and large quantities of medicines.

Equipment is now being assembled to be sent for 10,000 convalescent beds to be set up in private homes in England, Davis revealed.

He paid tribute to the American Red Cross committee in London, which, he said, is working day and night to see that aid is distributed rapidly and efficiently to the stricken areas. The committee is headed by Daniel Grant, chief officer, and Ambassador Joseph E. Kennedy, honorary chairman.

Washington merchants and organizations throughout the city will exhibit in store and office windows displays calling attention to the annual Red Cross Roll Call during the entire period of the membership drive, September 23-October 19, according to reports received by A. Leftwich Sinclair, jr., window displays committee chairman.

Windows protraying Red Cross activities will be on display beginning Monday when the membership campaign opens, according to Mr. Sinclair, who said that stores cooperating with the committee will feature dramatic exhibits depicting various activities of Red Cross volunteer services during the opening days of the Roll Call.

Salesman, Shot by Wife, Dies

An inquest will be called at noon today to investigate the shooting of Oscar Rush, 42-year-old automobile salesman, who died at Gallinger Hospital yesterday of a pistol wound inflicted by his 25-year-old wife.

The woman, Mrs. Mary E. Sibley Rush, collapsed in the arms of her mother, Mrs. Robert A. Sibley, at the Women's Bureau when word of her husband's death reached the institution.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Women's Bureau, said Mrs. Rush was "very much broken up" at the news and requested to see the body. It had not been decided by police officials last night whether her request would be granted before the inquest.

Clinging To Democracy

Popular government has managed to survive the tidal wave of totalitarianism in only three nations of continental Europe. One is Switzerland. A second is Finland. The third, Sweden, has just given dramatic evidence of her democratic faith by holding a general election.

The last such election was held in 1936, and since members of the Second Chamber (Lower House) of the Swedish Riksdag hold office for a term of four years, the mandate of that body had run out. In view of the extremely critical international situation and the grave dangers confronting Sweden, it would have been understandable if the balloting had been postponed to a more propitious occasion. Some voices were raised urging just such a course.

But the government decided against it. As Joachim Joesten wrote recently in The Post, Premier Hansson took the position that an election, far from endangering Sweden's unity, would actually exert a relaxing and reassuring influence.

So the election was held and its results were to accentuate a long-dominant trend in Swedish politics. The Social Democrats, ardent exponents of Sweden's "middle way," won a clear-cut majority, adding 19 seats to those already under their control in the Second Chamber. The Agrarians were the heaviest losers. The small and unimportant Swedish Communist Party declined in strength from five seats to three. No Nazi Party was in the field.

Despite the Social Democratic victory, there are no indications that that party will try to form a government of its own. On the contrary, it is certain that the present coalition regime will be continued. So the election will effect no change in either domestic or foreign policies. Left to itself, Sweden will remain a real democracy, eschewing both naziism and communism. But whether it will be left to itself is, unfortunately, anything but certain.

The winds of disaster blowing from the south and the east have destroyed the independence of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, of Denmark, Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands and left an evil impress on Finland. Thus far Sweden has been spared. Her plight is precarious. It is nonetheless significant and heartening, however, that she continues to pursue her democratic course just the same.

Court Improvements

Improvement of the District's judicial system is carried a step further by the report of Justice Laws and Assistant Clerk Hamilton, on their study of domestic relations commissioners. Systems like that which they suggest for the District Court are working sucessfully in Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

The proposed domestic relations commissioner would be assigned to investigate and report the facts of alimony, child custody and similar cases. Many of the circumstances necessary for the court to know are beyond dispute, and could be described by an impartial examiner in such a way as to satisfy both parties. Much tedious and time-wasting trial procedure could thus be eliminated.

Court officials emphasize that the commissioner system would not preclude a full hearing for all who felt additional testimony was necessary to their causes. A test by Justice Laws last summer indicated, however, that many disputants preferred the investigator. On a number of occasions attorneys for both sides requested an examination of the circumstances by Mr. Hamilton, acting in the capacity of a commissioner.

There seems to be little doubt that a domestic relations commissioner could speed up court action and thus help to clear congested dockets. In considering such an innovation at this time, however, it is well to remember that the courts in the District may be on the verge of sweeping changes. The Police and Municipal courts will be merged if the Kennedy bill to reorganize the District government becomes law. A movement is also on foot to transfer domestic relations cases from the District and Juvenile courts to a new tribunal.

In improving the details, we must be careful not to lose sight of the larger structures on which they depend.

Rediscovered Principle

As preparations for the drafting of men for military training go forward, the careful efforts which have been made to integrate this undertaking with the American way of life will become more and more apparent. Congress has not granted the Army powers to conscript any man it may select between the ages of 21 and 35. Rather it has assigned the task of designating men for military training to a multitude of civilian boards.

This distinction may seem to be a minor detail. In practice, however, it assumes a tremendous importance. The unfortunate effect of a summons from the Army in Washington is avoided. Men will not be dragooned by a distant power. They will be selected to train for the common defense by boards composed of their own neighbors. The actual drafting will be done by civilian agencies set up in more than 6,000 communities.

Members of the local selective service boards will be appointed by the President, but only on recommendations by State Governors. At each stage of registration, priority listing and physical examination the prospective trainees will confront local citizen groups. Each man will have an opportunity to present his case before patriotic civilians living in the same locality. And appeals can be carried to other civilian boards.

There is nothing new, of course, in this procedure. As Mr. Mark Sullivan has well pointed out, it was applied with eminent success in the drafting of men for the World War. Indeed, it is the traditional American way of putting into effect national legislation that intimately affects the lives of the people. Use of that method in the present military training program is notable chiefly because it has been so frequently ignored in dealing with other national problems.

It is strange that Congress should have forgotten this basic principle of democratic government when it was dealing with such problems as relief and legislation on minimum wages and maximum hours. Surely the relief of hunger and want is not more of a national problem than raising an army. Yet the Administration of Federal aid to the unemployed is highly centralized, and the selection of men for the Army is worked out on a wholly local basis.

The Administration has made few blunders more destructive of democratic technique than its centralization in Washington of activities which closely touch the lives of the people. It has not trusted local groups to handle even those problems requiring intimate knowledge of local conditions. The consequent drift away from local responsibility must inevitably have a weakening effect upon the capacity of the people to govern themselves.

Certainly in this respect the Selective Service Act is more democratic than many other statutes adopted in recent years. Its revitalizing effect upon the so-called grass roots of our democratic system will be a constructive influence, quite apart from its contribution to national defense.

Decline And Fall

For some years travelers have returned from Brooklyn with reports that it is something quite distinct and apart from all the rest of the United States. The ordinary Brooklynite, they have said, is as indifferent to anything that may happen west of the East River or east of Coney Island as a twelfth century Chinaman might have been to anything happening beyond the Great Wall.

These travelers have been suspected of hyperbole. But the truth seems to be that they have understated rather than exaggerated the matter. Brooklyn is not merely something apart from the rest of America; it is something apart from this world and perhaps from this universe.

And on that, Brooklyn is, in a sense, to be congratulated. But if the inhabitants of Brooklyn are exempt from all the perils and panics that beset the rest of us in this dark hour of human history, they are, nevertheless, subject to other dangers and despairs of which, happily, we can know little or nothing.

On Monday afternoon, for example, the people of Brooklyn were shaken to the bottom of their souls by a crisis all their own. The apocalyptic battle at Ebbets Field between the Children of Light and the Minions of Darkness (or, if you prefer, between the Dodgers and Cincinnati) had reached the tenth inning. With the score tied and only one away, the unholy Reds had advanced a runner to third base and another had got to first by way of a base on balls. Nobody less than Frank McCormick was coming up to hit.

Imagine what delirious cries of gladness went up from 6,000 throats as the redoubtable McCormick appeared to hit into a perfect double play. Mr. Johnny Hudson pounced upon that ball like an eagle upon a rabbit and with one flick of his wrist flung it into the waiting, nay eager, paws of Mr. Coscarart.

It was at this moment that the Red Chieftain, one McKechnie, muttered an incantation to his familiar spirits. Through such black art was the sacred Brooklyn earth induced to leap up and snatch the ball from the clutch of Mr. Coscarart.

The whole thing was a monstrous and obvious piece of witchcraft. Nevertheless, the umpire in chief, one Magerkurth, decreed all runners safe. From the moment he spoke justice, human decency, all the finer things of life, perished from the earth. A new dark age had come. In vain the eloquent and impassioned Mr. Durocher appealed to Magerkurth's hypothetical better nature. The noble Durocher was ruthlessly purged. Then a runner was easily scored by an outfield fly and Red ruin enveloped the entire scene.

But the perfidy of Magerkurth had kindled a fierce flame that would not die—the flame of vengeance. As the umpire was leaving the field Nemesis overtook him in the burly form of Mr. Frankie Gernano, who sent him sprawling on the outfield sward. And though it was not long ere Mr. Gernano was led away to the hoosegow, we dare say that his eyes were gleaming with the exultant light of martyrdom.

Coordination Needed

The District has experienced another confused case of delay in emergency ambulance service—the third in two months. This time a victim of convulsion waited an hour. In August a man lay dying on the street for 55 minutes after an automobile accident and a person suffering from heat exhaustion was prone on the sidewalk for 39 minutes before the ambulance arrived.

Fixing the blame for this inefficiency is a matter for thorough investigation. Numerous persons and agencies are involved, and any or none of them may be at fault. The most obvious point is that the recurrence of these mix-ups demonstrates anew the need for a coordinated ambulance dispatching service.

Such a service for the District and surrounding territory is planned by a private nonprofit organization, the Health Security Administration. It is expected to be in operation by the end of this month. Notable improvements over the present haphazard arrangement are expected.

Only a test will show, however, whether a private agency can adequately furnish Washington with service which really is a public function. H. S. A. officials do not offer their plan in competition with any other which may be in the making. The Commissioners should not in any case forget the proposal of Health Officer Ruhland, for an ambulance control department under the District government.

Potato-Bug War

Recurrent complaints and accusations indicate that Germany, for some reason, has become acutely conscious this year of the Colorado potato bug. Some weeks ago patrols in the Harz Mountains were explained by the necessity of preventing this pest of American origin from entering the Reich through France. Now the Nazis charge that British airmen are dropping bags of the insects on Belgium, Luxemburg and Germany.

The British, incidentally, deny they are using this form of attack. Moreover a Harvard entomologist points out that Germany is not, as one would gather from the hurt tone of the complaints, customarily free from potato bugs. On the contrary, it has been severely afflicted for some years.

The people of Europe are eating more potatoes this year to make up for deficiencies in other foods. Part of the crop is also going into the manufacture of various products. So the potato supply may run low this winter in Belgium, Luxemburg and Germany. If so, straws in the wind suggest that it will be the fault of the potato bug.

So be it. Nobody likes the potato bug. But having established that fact, it is necessary to blame the potato bug on somebody else. First it was the French, then it was the British. In the end how can the Coloradans hope to escape?

"Sam" no longer is an appropriate name for our national and paternalistic uncle. It should be changed to "George."

Note On Annoyances

From the Montgomery Advertiser

War, it seems, has its petty annoyances just as does every other condition of human living. And sometimes petty annoyances can become so troublesome that they almost overshadow the really great difficulties and troubles incident to living.

Britishers, so Time magazine reports, have protested so bitterly over the duration of the banshee wails of the air raid warning sirens that the signal has been shortened from two minutes to one.

There is, for all things, an explanation, and Time provides an interesting one for the nervous dislike evinced by Britishers for the siren wails. It writes:

"No haphazard noisemakers are Britain's wailing sirens. Sounded by air pressure operating on electric oscillators, they produce a discord which in the Middle Ages was regarded as the work of the devil. This discord is the augmented fourth (example: C and F sharp on the piano), was called the tritone because it spans three whole tones. The tritone was banned in sacred music, thus giving rise to a maxim: Mi contra fa est diabolus in musica (the tritone is the devil in music). When the sirens, beginning on a sweet major third or fifth, slip up and down into the blood-curdling tritone, it sounds that way to Londoners."

Party Names

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler last week in his column inquired into the basis for designating our form of Government "democratic." Benjamin Franklin said the Constitutional Convention had determined upon; "A republic, if you can keep it."

Political party labels have meant little for many years; they mean even less in 1940.

Thomas Jefferson was called a "Republican." The opposing party was "Federalist." Fundamentally, with all the varying mutations of name, the early division between a government all centered and administered from the nation's capital, and embracing most, if not all, the varied activities of Government and a government strictly limited to general affairs with all else left to States and local communities has been the real division between thoufhtful students of the real functions of Government.

In 1812, the followers of the ideas of Jefferson were known as "Democrat-Republican." The "Federalist" party lost standing to be succeeded by the "Whigs," which party collapsed with the defeat of Henry Clay in 1932.

Andrew Jackson was the leader of the "Democrat" party in 1828, but even in that election his party in Virginia was known as "National Republican."

About 1850 the "Democrat" party split into Northern and Southern groups, some of whom were greatly outraged at the orgnaization of the "Republican" party in 1856. They claimed that this name already belonged to the "Democrats."

In 1940, we find the party organization called "Democrat" is really "Federalist," while those opposed are back to the Jeffersonian designation of "Republican."

Only the inept are fooled by phrases.

Mr. Lippmann's Conclusions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Walter Lippmann, in his article on "Defense Against War," in The Post of September 14, has served his readers with a curious mixture of certain facts and rather dubious general conclusions from them. In reciting the steps by which the European powers were eliminated from continental United States and their intervention in the Western Hemisphere forestalled by the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine, Mr. Lippmann comes to the conclusion that the United States made themselves secure "by seizing their opportunities and by collaborating with Britain against all the other European empires whenever they saw that the British interest and the American were the same." Incidentally this statement sounds like one from a British history book. The points I should like to make, however, are that the American Revolution was not a case of collaboration with the British; that the cession of Florida came about not only by the collapse of the Spanish Empire in Europe but because it had been used as a base of operations against the United States by the British during the War of 1812 and several years afterwards; that Louisiana was purchased because, among other reasons, the British were threatening to attack it in their war with Napoleon; and lastly, that it is questionable whether Canning inspired the Monroe declaration or simply was in sympathy with it. Opinion on this last point differs, I believe. Among all the instances cited by Mr. Lippmann I fail to see any strong evidence of British policy being responsible, at least purposely, for American security in this hemisphere. In reality we owe our greatest debt to the French Empire for our present continental territory and security.

Further along Mr. Lippmann states that "the genius of their policy lay in the clarity with which they saw that the successful defense of the United States must lie in keeping the threat of war at a distance. They never made the cardinal mistake of thinking that the place to defend a country is on its own frontiers and that the place to fight wars is at home." The fact still remains that the United States in all its wars has fought successfully, in its own defense, and on the soil of this continent, excepting, of course, the World War, and not thousands of miles across the ocean—the Revolution, the War of 1812, the War with Mexico, the Civil War and the War with Spain, which was fought right on our doorstep. With the exception, I think, of the Spanish-American War, these wars were all defensive ones. If the past is any criterion of the future, the conclusion must be that the United States can wage a successful war in self-defense on its own territory. The true interpretation of American policy is, I believe, that Jefferson and Monroe believed that the territories they acquired were essential to the formation of an impregnable frontier, and that as long as the European powers were barred from strategic footholds in the Western Hemisphere that hemisphere would be capable of preventing any further European intervention there. The fact that the United States had fought off two military invasions by a great power certainly lent force to the Monroe Doctrine. Whether England would have actually backed up that doctrine is a matter of pure conjecture.

The proposition offered by Mr. Lippmann, "that to be secure a nation must push war away from its frontiers and not let its own territory become the battlefield," sounds a little ex-post facto in view of our own history. On the other hand, it is obvious to any observer that the life-saving policy of Great Britain should and must be to prevent war from ever reaching her shores. Her one defense against actual territorial invasion was the defeat of the prospective invader on the other side of the channel. Instead of 25 divisions she should have had every man, gun and plane she could produce in Flanders and France. By retreating from Flanders, Britain abandoned her greatest bulwark. Mr. Lippmann's statement, then, is absolutely correct as far as Great Britain is concerned but geographical size and location still have a great deal to do with war and diplomacy, and what is applicable to an island off the continent of Europe hardly applies to a continent 3,000 miles away.

Nevertheless, when Mr. Lippmann says that "the only way to enjoy isolation is to practice a diplomacy which pushes war away from the homeland," no one can quarrel with him; for if this principle were followed in Europe, there would have been no war; if this country belatedly follows it, it may yet be saved from embroilment in other nations' disputes. What we must decide is whether we shall have diplomacy or one-sided intrigue; and if diplomacy, what constitutes diplomacy "which pushes war away from the homeland."

Willkie's Difficulties

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Wallace's taunt that Mr. Willkie accepts about everything which the New Deal has done finds an echo in the thoughts of some people who believe we should have an exclusively conservative party as opposed to the Democratic Party in its present radical dress.

The difficulty of the situation should be taken into account. The voters by a landslide indorsed the free spending under the New Deal. They have enjoyed having a rich uncle at Washington and would resent a direct attack upon him on that specific issue.

Mr. Willkie may accept the fait accompli, as a thing done and no longer worth arguing about, without committing himself to it. As regards its principal feature, he distinctly states that he will do away with the excuse for opening up the Treasury to the people by bringing back employment through private enterprise, instead of continuing the present policy of hostility toward private industries and of Government competition with them.

A campaign launched directly against the rich-uncle idea would, of course, play directly into the hands of Wallace, Ickes and Co., and would keep the present Administration in power for all time.

The Hatch Act cannot be applied to the part of the program which is connected with the Treasury spendings, and Mr. Willkie's trip through the West will not be a triumphal procession with a grateful people bearing banners inscribed with such mottoes as, "Thank you, Mr. Willkie, for the playground you gave us."

It is evident that a general alarm would take place if he threatened to knock the props out of the structure functioning at present in terms of ready cash before the power has been given him to restore prosperity and by so doing to make the present reliance upon the rich uncle obsolete.

Some of us believe that Mr. Willkie even from the conservative point of view is doing very well, especially under difficult conditions foreign to American elections until recently.

The third-term issue alone should give him the necessary number of votes. And its implications strengthen the issue against it. As to a debt of gratitude, the voters have paid it by the customary two terms. ARTHUR RICHMOND.

Democracy Waning

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to true democracy, Thomas Jefferson said, ". . . It's method no monopoly and consequently no bureaucracy."

Judging from what seems well entrenched political monopoly today; centralization of power; contempt for dissenting minorities and increasing desire for still more power as evidenced by the present Administration, it would seem that democracy, as we have known it, is very much on the wane.

A New Deal, of some sort, seemed inevitable, inasmuch as the old order was in a state of decrepitude and decay. However, the present structure, erected on deficit sands, bureaucracy and unmitigated waste is hardly an improvement on more ancient political orders. The wise words of De Tocqueville seem especially applicable to the present dark period: "A new political party needs founding. Its aim should be 'More democracy, to save the democracy we have.' Or, what little that is left of it!"

The Post Impressionist

Examination Daze

WHEN GILBERT and Sullivan declared "a policeman's lot is not a happy one" they should have included the fact that neither is the lot of a Civil Service examiner.

Over a period of three days, 12,000 aspirants for substitute laborer jobs in the postoffice recently tried to pass a simple examination, and after examining six separate groups, I kept wondering who set the average national intelligence at 12 years. Personally, I'm convinced that the average person's I. Q. is about eight years.

Despite all the elaborate schooling facilities free to all those adults staring up at me in that classroom, every other one could scarcely write his name and address, answer a simple question in writing, or choose the correct word from a list of five. Furthermore, one chap stopped his indecipherable scribbling in despair, and asked me furtively, "Please, teacher, kin ah get my fren' to write in these here answers?"

After ushering him out of the room, I noticed that his neighbor had placed an enigmatic "X" in the space "Sex (male or female)?" Another had written "man" on the dotted line, while many appeared to toady up to the postoffice jobs, for they had carefully inserted "mail."

Men with obviously black hair jotted down the description of their hirsute growth as "reddish." Many had "dark eyes" that were brown, or hazel. Ah, Tchichornya! . . . One chap bugged the "windows of his soul" at me. "What the color o' my eyes, please suh?"

"Brown."

"Thank yuh, suh! Thank yuh. That my name too. That's good luck, sure 'nough!"

They were a rascally crew of pirates, if judged solely by their 10-cent store photographs. But I was a bit taken aback by the photograph of one young man. The pale cheeks of his portrait were tinted a bright red!

I warned the competitors to affix their photographs firmly to their admission cards. Otherwise their identity might be difficult to establish with 12,000 sets of papers, cards, and pictures being shuffled back and forth. I also offered to supply pens and ink to those who had only well-chewed pencil stubs. But when I asked the would-be recipients of pins and pens to raise their hands, confusion resulted until the wilderness of arms was separated into "those who want pins to stick with, and those who want 'pins' to scratch with."

There was exasperating futility in giving explicit directions on how to fill out the preliminary papers. Even after several warning and detailed explanations as to what, how, and where to place answers, many persons would pop their hands into the air and request help, or go blithely ahead putting right answers in the wrong places. Under the warning "Do not fill in these blanks," some competitors calmly entered their weights and ages in the boxes "Relative Weight" and "Average Percentage of Ratings." One man was 135 feet tall and 5 feet 7 inches in weight. Another was aged 167 years, but didn't know when or where he was born. Many swore they didn't know where their mothers or fathers were born, although there was no question whatever on the paper about their parents or their nativity.

One middle-aged man grew glassy-eyed and started trembling at my approach. He seemed transfixed with terror. I glanced down at myself; but I hadn't suddenly turned into a skeleton. So I placed my hand gently on the man's shoulder. That only made him shudder, and his lips juggled up and down. It did no good to assure him that the examination was a cinch. He just stared and trembled. I led him out of the room and left him to gyrate bewilderedly in the corridor while I dashed back to the classroom. When I returned some moments later I was rewarded by a sickly grin and the explanation "I get nervous like this often; no, mister, it's no use trying to take that examination. I get too sick just trying to figure things out."

Several competitors streaked through their papers in 15 minutes; the majority struggled over the final page even after 40 minutes. The hopeless ignorance of this latter group was astounding; they simply had no ability to express an intelligent answer to a simple question. For instance, when asked to choose a part of an airplane from the words "trolley, hangar, propeller, vise, anvil" the answers were usually divided among "trolley" and "hangar."

Many believed that "brass" rusts easier than "iron." And I wouldn't care to be lost with the men who chose "barometers" as direction-finders.

I felt sorry for poor Noah Webster—whirling around madly in his grave—for I could glance at random over the papers and see that "silver" was a metal lighter in weight than cork; "gold" is made in a factory, "cloth" is more brittle than glass, "feeble" means the same as "fast," and being "resolute" is "harmful."

Another competitor, a pacifist no doubt, thought a musket was more modern than a rifle. And most of the competitors would never succeed as farmers. They believed that fertilizer was more important to plant growth than moisture. Maybe that's why our groceries are so blamed expensive!

Some women were also herded through the crowded, noisy corridors of the high school, and into the classrooms. Obviously they were huskies, but one wondered if they could really toss around heavy mail bags in order to pass the strength tests.

The majority of test-takers for the 55 cents an hour jobs were unemployed, or worked for small salaries in laundries, groceries, hotels, restaurants, schools, Government positions, or were employed as taxi drivers, truck drivers, valets, watchmen, or porters.

As I dismissed them singly, upon completion of their examinations, several made their exits with a hearty and relieved "Thanks," and then "Good luck to you, professor!"

Me they're wishing good luck!

INVICTUS.

The Security Curse

By Dorothy Thompson

II. The Example Of France

CHARACTERISTIC of the twentieth century middle class civilization, which collapsed so disastrously in France, is the emphasis on security.

Indeed, in France the idea of security had reached its height. It permeated the whole of life—financial security, emotional security, national security. To be a rentier—to secure a certain small income, whether from investments or pension—was the universal idea. To add somewhat to the family fortune through marriage and to protect the joint estate by having few children, dominated the attitude toward the family. To eat well and live easily was a goal, except in the purely intellectual life, where the demands on the person were very high, but tended to be divorced from action or responsibility for action. To protect what already existed, on the one side by guaranties given by others and on the home front by the Maginot Line, was the ideal of foreign policy and national defense.

THE MAGINOT LINE—looking at it with hindsight—was an ominous indication of the lengths to which the idea of comfort could be carried. A fortune was sunk in constructing as a defense what amounted to being an underground luxury hotel.

First of all, it was made soundproof, in order to spare the nerves of the fighters the horrors of noise. I was in the Hochwald fortress on May 14, during the Battle of Belgium, when, for the first time in the history of the line, this great fort was in action. Except for the actual gun turrets, the fort was doubtless the quietest place in France. The chief of the fortress, Col. M——, had been resident in it for eight years. It had become for him a quiet and even luxurious home. It contained mess rooms for men and officers, each with a bar decorated like an elegant night club.

Nowhere in France was the food better. Our luncheon on that fateful day, when the Battle of Sedan was well under way, consisted of hors d'oeuvres, chicken with vegetables, asparagus, green salad, an ice, petit fours glaces—baked in the fortress kitchen—black coffee and three kinds of wine. (The men's mess was beef and beer, but concocted of prime beef and vegetables, and first rate.)

I was told that the fortress contained stores of ammunition sufficient to supply its great guns for three years. Even at that time, a fleeting thought passed my mind as to whether the Maginot Line did not mean the degeneration of the concept of the trench into A Home for Retired Officers and Soldiers. The ammunition for three years was not needed. The men who needed ammunition were the exposed infantry battling the Germans without sufficient rounds.

TO ATTACK the left wing of France—the unions of the industrial workers—for seeking to translate into their lives the most insecure in France, the values that dominated the whole middle and upper class society which dominated the very preparations for war—war without discomfort and war without tears—is preposterous. The values of the masses are invariably those of the ruling classes, into whose ranks they aspire to come. If the epitome of defense was war without discomfort, what expectation was there that the poilu of the infantry would heroically face war which was hell let loose?

CHARACTERISTIC also of our comfortable middle-class society is a universal motto of "Safety First." Nobody in France wanted this war. The pacifism that developed was not, however, an active and righteous hatred of war as such, accompanied by the determined will to rebuild the world in which injustices would be righted even at the cost of economic sacrifice. It was the pacifism of constant retreat before the active and aggressive war-making spirit. It sought safety in appeasement, without the strength to set or help set the terms of appeasement.

Again, the tendency to blame the masses or the leaders of the left for a spirit of appeasement, which is only the desire to escape last consequences, is preposterous. The classes were the people who first tried to appease Hitler. The masses wanted active intervention in Spain. The classes supported Franco, and in supporting him made every argument for Fascism. In the salons of Paris in the winter of 1936 I heard only the most fulsome praise of Franco.

The French people are highly intellectualized and very logical.

The leaders of France preached appeasement one day and war the next. The men who collaborated to hand over to the Germans forty divisions at Munich, the secrets of the Maginot Line, the Schneider-Creusot armament works and with them the arms factory for the whole of southeastern Europe, and the Russian alliance, gave away more than these things—things, incidentally, which a year of further preparation could not begin to replace. For "safety first" at the moment, they gave away the psychological security of the French masses. When the war finally came, the government immediately clamped into jail or concentration camp all the Communists, all the German refugees, including thousands who had lost all through Hitler and were his implacable enemies, at the same time leaving in positions of power the Bonnets and all those who had consistently flirted with the Hitler regime.

THIS PRODUCED a wholly paradoxical situation. The men at the front did not believe in the government behind them. They believed they had been sold out twice—in Spain and in Czecho-Slovakia—and that the same gentleman would sell them out again. It was not, therefore, the Communists who sowed in their minds the seeds of doubt. Rather, the Communists were able to do so because what the Communists said appealed to their experience and logic. And the men behind—the men who were leading—did not trust their own masses. Many of them were more afraid of French Socialism than they were of Hitler. Well do I remember the remark, "I'd rather see Hitler in the Champs Elysees than Leon Blum." Well, they got their dreadful preference.

It is absolutely impossible for the leadership of a nation to preach against the push of the masses for more security, to decry "safety first," if they themselves have failed to set a standard, and if they add to insecurity of life and work a profound intellectual doubt. The masses in France feared that their mobilization was less for the purpose of beating Hitler than for the purpose of destroying French trade unions, social gains and their own limited security. They were never sure whom the leadership regarded as the real enemy—Hitler or the French workers. Conversely, they were not sure themselves who was the real enemy—Hitler or the French capitalists.

In this paradoxical situation, occurring in a nation which for a generation had put security above all earthly values, any Fifth Column could work—even one much less efficient than the German. The end of the safety ideal was death—the total disorganization and total insecurity which is all that is left of the Republic of France.

Fair Enough

Mr. Roosevelt's Offer

I TAKE as my text that portion of President Roosevelt's speech to the Teamsters' Union wherein he said that Government is determined to help labor unions clean house of those "few" persons who have betrayed them.

To that I would reply, "listen to who's talking." The man who is determined to help labor clean house is himself the head of an orgnaization that is infested with notorious grafters, racketeers, cheats and free-style enemies of every decent principle of the American people and of the liberties which Mr. Roosevelt was hired to uphold.

He is in league with the two most corrupt political mobs in the United States and with most of the second-string gangs of political corruptioneers. His nomination in Chicago, so short a time ago that the reek of that occasion still obscures the wholesome stench of the yards, was accomplished under the political and social auspices of some of the very same gorillas whom he now purposes to remove from the ranks of labor with a capital L.

MR. ROOSEVELT maintains in Washington and elsewhere in the country a horde of parasitic chiselers whose character and nominal or mock duties parallel those of the cooties in the seams of labor's shirt, and his Administration, on the whole, is no cleaner than that of the American Federation of Labor. It is, in fact, much worse, being much bigger and more vital to the Nation.

In general, the New Deal or Social-Democratic Party is a Gutzom Borglum version of the American Federation of Labor—a fact which has been noted, incidentally, by Mr. Dan Tobin, the President of the teamsters, who was President Roosevelt's host on this occasion.

The leaders of the international unions derive their power from the leaders of the local unions, many, not "few," of whom are crooks and known to the international leaders as such. The question is whether to fight them and risk defeat for reelection at their hands or play ball with them and thus assume an obligation to connive at their exploitation of the rank and file and their defamation of the cause of labor.

HONEST MEN, of whom it is a pleasure to say that Mr. Tobin is one, shut their eyes and hold their noses against corruption in their neighbor unions, lest the crooked leaders of the offensive neighbors kick up political trouble in a lazy and complacent little club of high-salaried elder statesmen.

That has been Mr. Tobin's own policy, and it will be noticed in the text of his own remarks to the convention which Mr. Roosevelt addressed that he was careful not to refer to crooks in other unions than his own and to say, incorrectly, that the crooks in the Teamsters' Union were not many.

In the big national body, the American Federation of Labor, just as in the national councils of President Roosevelt's party, thanks to their power to deliver the vote, crooks are treated kindly by men whose protestations of virtue and altruism become a miserable fake in such company. And President Roosevelt, as head of the Social-Democratic Party and the cooperative colleague of political members, is on no better ground than William Green of the A. F. of L., and certainly is not qualified to lecture any union on the need of cleaning house.

TOBIN'S POSITION in the A. F. of L. may be compared to that of Harold Ickes in the Social-Democratic Party. He sits in with crooks whom he knows to be dangerous enemies of the little man, and Mr. Ickes, gulping down many a jagged word of his own utterance against the political racketeers of Chicago and Jersey City, makes political fellowship with them to the total discredit of his own professed concern for the rights and liberties of the people. Their reasons are alike—the desire for power—even at the expense of the rank and file citizen.

The pot has offered to burnish the kettle—a generous gesture, to be sure, but not original.

Trust-Busting Arnold

By Ernest K. Lindley

Rebirth Of The Sherman Act

IN LESS ABNORMAL times, the front pages of the newspapers would be bedecked almost daily with accounts of a novel and extremely important economic and political experiment—the first comprehensive, persistent effort to enforce the antitrust laws. Although the Sherman Act is 50 years old and at intervals has given rise to sensational suits, it experienced a sort of rebirth about two years ago under the direction of Thurman W. Arnold.

Arnold is one of the big surprises of the New Deal. When he was named Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division two years ago, he was known chiefly as a professor of law at Yale who had written two penetrating and sardonic books. Earlier in his career he had acquired practical political experience as a State legislator and mayor in his native State of Wyoming. There was nothing in his public record to indicate that he was going to revolutionize enforcement of the antitrust laws. In fact, in his writings he had spoofed them so thoroughly that ardent believers in them, such as the late Senator Borah, were hesitant about confirming him.

Arnold, however, began applying the antitrust laws with zeal and fearlessness which have knocked the breath out of an uncounted number of businessmen and labor-union officials. A few of his predecessors were fearless and zealous. But none was so successful as Arnold in getting the money to translate these qualities into effective action. When Theodore Roosevelt was busting the trusts, there were only five lawyers and four stenographers in the antitrust division. In 1933 there were only 15 lawyers.

ARNOLD LIKES to compare these skeleton staffs with the 1,200 employes of the Maritime Commission, the 2,800 of the Civil Aeronautics Board, and the 1,200 of the Securities and Exchange Commission—none of which has duties so broad as the enforcement of the antitrust laws. Although his staff is still small, compared to those administrative agencies, he managed to get his appropriation hiked to $1,300,000—as against an average of $300,000 a year from 1929 to 1936. The additional money has earned dividends of 400 or 500 per cent from fines collected—not to mention the hundreds of millions of dollars which Arnold thinks he has saved consumers.

The bottlenecks, or restraints, broken up by Arnold have ranged all the way from the building industry in numerous cities to milk distribution, optical glass, the ethyl gasoline.

Pending is a monumental effort to reorganize the gasoline-marketing system. It is being held in abeyance until the National Defense Commission decides whether or not it will hamper the defense program.

ARNOLD FRIGHTENS and bewilders most visitors to his office. He talks like a battery of antiaircraft guns, filling the air with streams of star shells, tracer bullets and high explosives. The visitor is never sure which is which. And if he turns for guidance to Arnold's earlier books his bewilderment deepens. It is almost impossible to tell when Arnold means business and when he is just talking for effect.

Now, however, a more reliable guide is available. Arnold has put down in plain English in a convenient book his views on the enforcement of the antitrust laws. ("The Bottlenecks of Business," by Thurman W. Arnold, Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50.)

Arnold argues the advantages of free competition with an ardor which no classical economist could excel. He makes it plain, however, that he is more interested in free competition because of its benefits to the consumer than because of any special regard for the virtues of the small businessman. Repeatedly he emphasizes that the efficiency, not the size, of the business should be the test. He has prosecuted small producers—as in the building industry—as well as big ones. And he has not hesitated to crack over the heads labor-union leaders who have combined with producers to keep consumers from enjoying the benefits of newer or cheaper articles and methods.

ARNOLD'S PLANS and ideas deserve special attention now because he is in danger of being sidetracked on the ground that antitrust prosecutions and the rearmament program do not harmonize. Arnold sets forth the entirely reasonable formula that he will not prosecute any specific restraint of trade which another agency of the Government certifies to be helpful to national defense. But he refuses to be blackmailed by the implied threat that an industry won't cooperate in national defense if it is brought to court for practices which violate the Sherman Act, even though those practices may have long preceded the national defense program.

Only recently an optical company tried to make the Navy believe that the fulfillment of a vital order would be delayed for months by an antitrust suit filed by Arnold. After a brief talk with Arnold, officials of the company withdrew their threat with alacrity, pleaded guilty to the antitrust violation charges, and paid a fine of $40,000.

Although Arnold perhaps has made some false starts, and although he reads more virtues than I can see into unrestrained competition, there will be real grounds for enxiety if he is stymied. Judiciously but fearlessly guided, antitrust-law enforcement can save the Government and the public vast sums and help to avert a sharp rise in prices, which is one of the dangers of the rearmament program. Moreover, even if they are antiquated—which Arnold thinks they are decidedly not—the antitrust laws are an old and reliable symbol of the economic system in which most Americans believe.

The Fortress That Is Britain

THERE IS an oft-quoted saying of Napoleon's that in war the moral is to the material as five is to one.

That has an old-fashioned sound, with grimly ironic overtones. Many will argue that whether true in the past or not, it is far from true under present conditions. The bravest man armed with only a rifle is no match for a moron with a machine gun. What counts today is force, and force alone. Victory, to paraphrase another of Napoleon's sayings, is on the side of the heaviest battalions; the side which wins is the side which has the greater number of trained fighting men, armored divisions, airplanes. Spiritual values no longer count.

TO SAY this, however, is to misread one of the real lessons of the war. The importance of materiel in modern warfare is certainly not to be discounted. Without the army and air force, the tanks and artillery he was able to put into the field Hitler could not have overrun half of Europe in the incredibly short time it took him to do so.

Yet the fact must not be forgotten that most of Hitler's victories were actually won before a shot was fired. Austria was conquered from within; Czecho-Slovakia betrayed by her friends; France was riddled by defeatism; treachery simplified the task of the German army in Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands.

The first assault of the Nazis has always been on the morale of their intended victims and this offensive was always carried out with the same diabolical ingenuity, the same indifference to truth, decency and humanitarianism, the same great organizing skill that has marked the actual operations of their army and air force.

IN THE BATTLE of Britain the ponderables have, from the first, been heavily weighted in Germany's favor.

The collapse of France liberated a vast German army which could be hurled against Britain, an army to whose own equipment could be added that captured from the enemy. The British, on the other hand, had lost most of their tanks, heavy artillery and other indispensable weapons as a consequence of the Dunkerque evacuation.

The German air force was then and remains today very much larger than is Britain's. That is why, despite heavy losses—185 planes on one day alone—the Nazis have been able to continue the attack on London with unremitting fury for days on end. And this air force has the incalculable advantage of being able to operate from nearby bases on the other side of the English Channel. The possession of the whole of continental Europe's western coastline, from Narvik to Biarritz, has also given Hitler innumerable submarine bases and concentration points for an invasion of England.

NO DOUBT it was this great disparity in material between Germany and Great Britain, a disparity evident in all categories except sea power, which last June led many to predict that Great Britain's doom would be sealed within a month. Yet there is no evidence that Great Britain has ever begun to crack under the strain, despite the terrifying assault launched on her ports and industrial centers since August 8 and on the metropolis itself during the past eleven days.

There is no question that the German aerial assault on Great Britain has been fearfully destructive. Nor can anyone say that the cumulative effects of these air raids will not be serious. So far, however, they have neither destroyed British morale or weakened her capacity to resist.

IN THE BATTLE of Britain Hitler failed to win his accustomed first round. He appears to have made no dent in British morale. The Nazi air raids have killed hundreds of men, women and children and destroyed a vast deal of property. It has not weakened the will of the British people to fight on to the bitter end nor demolished their capacity to fight back.

The British used to comfort themselves in the past with the remark that Great Britain lost every battle but the last. That was once the excuse for complacency, for inaction, for muddling. It is now the child of a grim determination of the kind which the Nazis have never yet had to contend with. Like Antaeus, in the Greek fable, the British people have found redoubled strength by touching the earth they fiercely love.

Bygone Elections

Not All For Washington

George Washington may have been "First in War, First in Peace" but he was not in his day "First in the Hearts" of all "of His Countrymen.

G. Washington

At that he was the unanimous choice of the 69 electors voting in the first Electoral College which met in New York on February 4, 1789. In those days the Constitution provided that Presidential electors vote for two men for President, both of whom could not be residents of the same State. The candidate receiving the largest vote, if a majority, was to be President. The man receiving the second highest vote was to be Vice President.

It was universally regarded as fitting that Washington, whose masterly strategy had won the Revolution, should be President.

John Adams had other ideas. He had been on the committee which drafted the Declaration of Independence, had written a vigorous pamphlet in favor of the Constitution and had been Minister to England. He looked upon his own merits as fully equal to those of Washington. He regarded himself as a serious candidate for President.

However, Alexander Hamilton forestalled the danger of a tie vote. He sent word into several States urging them to vote unanimously for Washington and to give the other vote to a favorite son.

His advice was followed so well that Adams received only 34 votes. The others voted for were George Clinton and John Jay, of New York; Robert H. Harrison, Maryland; John Rutledge, South Carolina; John Hancock, Massachusetts; Samuel Huntington, Connecticut, and John Milton, James Armstrong, Edward Telfair and Benjamin Lincoln, Georgia.

Congressman Gets Parking Ticket Fixed

87 Summonses Are Adjusted in Week; Legislator Unnamed

Eighty-seven motorists, including one identified only as a "Member of Congress," had traffic tickets adjusted last week, according to records released at Police Headquarters yesterday.

The lawmaker's ticket, for violating a "No Parking at Any Time" sign, was adjusted with a warning at the First Precinct at the request of Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police. The record at the First Precinct, instead of listing a name and address, merely stated: "Not given."

Inspector Edwards said he could not remember the Congressman's name but recalled a telephone conversation with the man last week. He said he ordered a warning because he felt there was no violation.

Seventy-three of the traffic violation notices were taken care of when the recipients received warnings. The others were canceled.

Helen Nielebock, of 1439 Massachusetts avenue northwest, had a ticket canceled for parking overtime. She is attached to the German Embassy and Traffic Bureau records show she has received three warnings since April, 1939.

Diplomatic immunity also canceled a ticket for Adalbert Scholvin, of the German Embassy. He was tagged for violating an official sign.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Ankle Injury Puts Beauty in 'Lung'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GORDYNE SEDGWICK, 21-year-old "Queen of the New York State Fair," was taken from an "iron lung" in New York City yesterday after physicians ruled out the possibility that she was suffering from an inflammation of the spinal cord which might paralyze her lungs. They continued their observation and examination. The dark-haired Syracuse University student tripped and injured her ankle Friday night at the New York World's Fair and unusual symptoms developed

Thompson Indicted in Shooting of Detective Sergeant

Wilton P. Thompson, 24, colored, was indicted yesterday on three types of assault in the shooting of Detective Sergt. Earl L. Baker, who arrested him on the night of August 13.

Twenty-eight indictments handed up to Justice Jesse C. Adkins in the District Court accused Thompson of as many instances of housebreaking and larceny. The police said Thompson signed statements admitting the shooting and the housebreakings.

Sergt. Baker said in a statement that he was on his way home shortly after midnight when he recognized Thompson, for whom he had a warrant, in another automobile. He stopped and chased the man into a house at 1314 Fourth street northwest, where he arrested him.

Still in Hospital

Back on the street, Baker placed the man on a bench and began to take down the names of witnesses. He said that the man then attacked him and that his pistol fell to the ground. Baker said Thompson grabbed the weapon, shot him and fled. Baker was in a critical condition for weeks. He still is under treatment at Emergency Hospital.

Policeman Benjamin Hawze caught Thompson about 18 hours after the shooting, in the schoolyard of Armstrong School, at First and O streets northwest.

Also indicted yesterday was Rufus E. Cannon, 26, colored, on a charge of mailing an infernal machine. Postal officials said he signed a confession that he mailed a bomb which exploded at the U street postoffice the morning of August 21 and injured Harry B. Hess and Hyman Ritzenberg, postal employes.

Cannon's alleged confession stated that he mailed the bomb to scare a woman he accused of spreading scandalous stories about his association with another woman. He pleaded guilty when arraigned and was held in bail of $5,000 action for grand jury action.

Housing Shifts Made to Help Defense Units

Selective Service Groups Moving to Apartment Building

A series of major office shifts designed to expedite the conscription and national defense programs was announced yesterday by C. J. Guthridge, chief of the Public Building Administration's office of planning and space control.

The Army and Navy selective service committee, until now housed at the Army War College, is being moved into the old Potomac Park Apartments, now Government-owned, at Twenty-first and C streets northwest. The floors have already been occupied by the committee and the other five will be taken over as soon as they are evacuated by Army and National Defense Advisory Commission personnel.

The Army quartermaster general's office is being transferred to the new Railroad Retirement Building which is expected to be under full occupancy by October 1. Sharing this building with the quartermaster general will be the chief of Army Engineers and his staff.

Guthridge said the new Social Security Board building will become central headquarters of the defense commission, whose facilities and personnel are now spread over seven different buildings: Federal Reserve, Munitions, Potomac Park Apartments, North Interior, State, Commerce and Lafayette.

Earlier plans to move offices of the Secretary of War, chief of staff and other Army executives into the Social Security Building have been given up inasmuch as the first unit of the War Department Building is scheduled to be completed within a year.

Girl Discourages Man's Love, but Seems Chagrined When He Suggests 'Forgetting' Her; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is the old story of unrequited love. I have known the girl for three years, although I have been able to see her only at infrequent intervals during that time. For about a year, I have been in love with her,—not too seriously, as yet; but increasingly each time I see her.

She is 22, pretty, charming and intelligent (Phi Beta Kappa), but for some reason, she tries to convince herself (and others) that she is just a little girl lost in a great big world. That, however, is just pretense, because, when forced to, she can be very capable.

Recently, I told her I loved her. She replied that she didn't love me and advised me to forget her, lest I be hurt. Later, when I intimated that perhaps forgetting her was the best solution, she seemed chagrined. She discussed her other admirers with me, but said she was in love with none. They are fellows with whom she grew up, continuing the friendships through college.

Apparently she enjoys my company, for she has gone to considerable trouble to meet me on several occasions. Yet her attitude is confusing. Is she being smart or stupid? Or am I the one who is stupid? I can offer her a life of security, a life more exciting than the average, but one in which there may be occasional hardships and disappointments. I am willing to take a chance on being hurt, but only if there is reasonable assurance that the gleam I am following will not turn out to be a will-o'-the-wisp. Please give me the benefit of your opinions. JAY.

Don't Weigh Odds; Court to Win

DEAR JAY: The situation is more encouraging than not. Indeed, I believe you are making more headway than you realize. And more, perhaps, than the girl herself suspects. Whatever the final outcome may be, I think it was definitely to the good that you declared your love. That straightforward admission, when coupled with your implication of strength to forget her, if need be, is calculated to make it impossible for her to forget you—at least (or perhaps most especially) during this period when she is not in love with anyone else.

An admission of love—even a one-sided admission—immediately establishes a special bond between the lover and his beloved, even though the gift of devotion may be gently rejected. And when superimposed upon an already established friendship, it may give added depth and mellowness to the comradely relationship.

In my opinion, it is significant and reassuring that the girl, while advising you to "forget her, lest you be hurt," did not insist upon your staying away; but rather, seemed chagrined at the possibility you might take her discouraging words at face value. One infers, from her somewhat contradictory performance, that your declaration touched a responsive chord in her, of which she may have, as yet, only a vague or confused awareness.

Perhaps she had never thought of you in terms of sweetheart or husband until you said you loved her. Perhaps she didn't think of you at all, except when you called yourself to her attention. Probably it was a case of "out of sight, out of mind," since you saw her infrequently and she has a string of lifelong boy friends at her beck and call.

But the fact, implied in her conduct, that she is reluctant to ring down a final curtain on the courtship, now she knows how you feel, gives reason to think you have begun to capture her imagination. It is unlikely she would have discussed her other admirers with you, making it plain "she was in love with none," if she were unsympathetic to your devotion. On the contrary, were she fundamentally disinterested, she would have taken involuntary refuge in a show of reserve or intimidating flippancy, once you had laid down your hand. Also in going to considerable trouble to meet you on several occasions," she gives further indirect evidence of keener interest in you than she realizes or is ready to admit.

Since she is pretty, popular, intelligent, (even intellectual), and sufficiently versed in feminine wiles to camouflage her sturdy self sufficiency for the most part, I don't think you should take her "nay, nays" and surface indecision too seriously.

At best, you are justified in supposing she simply doesn't know her own mind yet, even though straws in the wind show she is favorably disposed. And, at worst, there is the possibility she has had a huntress' eye on you for months past; and now she has you to heel, she may be determined to finesse you into courting her with proper, indefatigable ardor before rewarding your prayers.

In any event, if you are in a position to marry, don't handicap yourself in your address to her, by stopping to weigh your chances of success. Woo her with the invincible purpose of winning, while knowing you have the strength to survive any blows that fate may deal. Don't abase yourself to her. Rather, offer her your life and your love; but let her understand that it is not in her power to break your spirit. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Black Rules Fall Fashions In Popularity

Favored by 85% Of Shoppers; Brown Is Smart Contrast

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

FEMININE conversation in Washington has now shifted from "Roosevert versus Willkie" to "I simply haven't anything new for fall."

After catching that first doleful view of yourself looking like the last rose of a September summer, the chances are your first fall outfit will be a black one. Stores report between 80 and 85 per cent of their shoppers' favoring the sooty sleekness of black for daytime, tea-time, office-time or dinner-time clothes.

If it's a date dress, it's likely to be a slim form-fitting one, such as New York stressed at it's formal showings. If your figure is neat and young, you'll probably chose the trumpet silhouette with a crepe or velvet flounce flaring out from a long slim sheath of inky crepe or wool. If it's a career dress that must dash from business conferences to club meetings, it's more likely to be a plain jacket dress of black wool with natty revers and buttons of velvet or jet.

Soft Types Most Popular

At the moment the most popular blacks in town are the softer, more gentle versions of this summer's side-saddle drape. The side or front drapery does wonders for faulty figures. We've watched varied assortments of women successfully conceal padded hips and waists with these flattering drapery disguises. Even the classic black shirtwaist dresses look softer and kinder this fall with their bishop sleeves and neck flounces.

Black dress buying often proves so distracting at the beginning of a new season that we have compiled the following suggestions:

Don't be carried away with colored trimmings or buttons, unless you already own one good untrimmed basic black. Your neckwear, gold, silver or jeweled accessories and colored belts, gloves and matching bags and hats will show up to better advantage and you can produce two or three changes with one good black as a basis.

Brown Smartest Contrast

Brown is the season's smartest color contrast for black. It can be Indian penny brown, benedictine or beetle brown, all bright with coppery undertones. These clear autumn browns, once disdained as a foil for black, are used either as entire accessory notes or merely as the wisp of a veil on a black hat along with a matching boutonniere, or an amber ornament. If you prefer, black cherry (dark, dark wine), frosty huckleberry (purple), or winter blue (a clear soldier greyed-blue) can be substituted, anything, in fact but black with black, which looks rusty and old this year. But be sure accessory colors really match and are not too profuse and "consciously" assembled.

A final tip on the wearing of black comes from Miss Mary Chess, a chic American who has spent many years in England gathering flower scents for sachets and perfumes. She states that black is a color which does not respond to light, insipid fragrances. It requires a scent as sophisticated and urbane as itself. Fragrances like "Tapestry" or "Elizabethan" (named after the present Queen Elizabeth) are regal and important enough for best black dresses. With their undertones of carnation and English flower bouquets, these scents are sweet and subtle on furs or accessories worn with black.

Hooked Rugs Easily Made

WARMLY homelike in your hallway or favorite nook, this gay hooked rug! And you'll love making it yourself, creating the colorful flowers and scrolls from bits of discarded clothing.

This rug, 20 by 34 inches, is made with gray coral, yellow and turquoise flowers on a brown background. The bordering scrollwork is beige.

For the hooking process you'll need a medium-sized hook and a simple wooden frame 24 by 38 inches, which you can buy or make. Woolen fabrics are best, but you can use cotton or linen. Cut in strips ½ inch wide or narrower for heavy materials.

The patterns for the flowers and scrolls you cut from heavy wrapping paper. On a burlap foundation (26 by 40 inches) draw a rectangle for your rug; trace off the scroll and floral patterns, then ink over all lines.

Now along the outline of your rug stitch carpet binding 1½ inches wide, tack edge of burlap to frame—and you're all ready for the fascinating business of hooking.

With one hand hold strip to be hooked underneath the burlap, and with the other punch hook through the burlap, catching the strip and pulling up a loop ¼ to ⅜ inch high. Skipping two or three threads, pull up another loop, and so on.

Traditional 'Chest Out' Posture Often Cause of Sway Back

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S UP-HILL work learning to undo what you have been taught to do in your youth. Probably all through grammar and high school you were admonished daily to throw out your chest and hold your shoulders back. If you were conscientious and tried to do as you were told you got an A for posture—and may now have a sway back!

Although generally known as sway back, this posture defect is technically termed lordosis and is described as an increase of the normal, physiological curve in the lumbar region with the pelvic angle increased and the knees thrust back. The effects of this exaggerated hollow at the small of the back are that the hips jut out and the tummy protrudes.

Strengthens Abdomen

The correction of sway back lies in strengthening the muscles of the abdominal wall. When these important muscles are in good tone and are held up, the muscles in the lower back are also strengthened and the curve is decreased.

There are a number of exercises which are extremely helpful in the correction of sway back. One of the simplest is to sit on the floor with the back pressed against a wall, the lower abdominal muscles pulled up and in. The exercise consists in sitting in this position for two five-minute periods a day. Later, when both sets of muscles are a bit stronger, try the long-sitting position without the support of a wall. To carry through on the benefits of this exercise, make a practice of sitting in a chair with the buttocks against the chairback, back straight and tummy pulled up and in. Correct sitting is the most important factor in overcoming this posture fault.

Forward Bending Good

Backward bending exercises should be avoided but forward bending is very good. The knee-chest position is excellent for strengthening the abdominal muscles and the lower back muscles. Get down on all fours, weight resting on the knees and forearms, head resting on the backs of the hands. Start the exercise with the back and abdomen relaxed, then push high with the middle of the back as you pull up and in with the abdominal muscles. Continue until the weight rests on the hands, arms straight, and the knees, and the back is arched like that of an angry cat.

Another corrective is to sit on the floor, hands at the sides and slightly back, legs straight out in front. Now, give a heave, come up with the legs and swing them back overhead, bracing your weight under the hips with the hands. Try to touch the feet to the floor beyond the head. In this position the small of the back is pushed out, the abdominal wall retracted. In a gymnasium this exercise is performed on horizontal bars.

All these exercises help to pull the buttocks down and under, to correct angle of the pelvis, to strengthen the abdominal muscles and straighten the back.

Physicist Grace Gowens Electrical Twins Act as 'Stooges' for Real Babies

TWO perpetually premature twins over at the Bureau of Standards are doing their bit toward the comfort of future incubator babies. Percy and Algernon by name, they are composed of copper cylinders wrapped with cheese cloth. They are the brain children of Physicist Grace Gowens, who has been assigned by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor to study the efficiency of incubators now used in hospitals.

Grace Gowens

"In order to measure the temperature of an incubator when in use," Miss Gowens explains, "we had to allow for the body heat of the baby itself. Percy and Algernon, who will appear by name in my final report, have electrical connections so that they can be warmed up before we put them to bed in the incubator we're testing. To find what size to make them, we put through a long distance call to a New York doctor and asked the approximate surface area of a premature baby. He didn't seem surprised—told us all we wanted to know."

She and her co-worker, Juanita Witters, are installed in a laboratory so equipped that they can arrange the weather in it to suit their experiments.

The trusting proprietor of an upstairs bookshop on Seventeenth street northwest has placed a trough of second-hand volumes priced at 10 cents each on the sidewalk in front of the building. A sign on the trough reads, "If you haven't time to come up, drop the money in Box No. 3" . . . A Pennsylvania avenue eatery opposite the State Department is called "Angel's Pure Food Restaurant."

A member of a religious sect once made the mistake of calling at the apartment of a very busy bachelor here. As she was about to bring out her tracts, he interrupted her. "I'd like to tell you something about MY religion," he said. "I happen to be a Mohammedan." With that he left the room, ostensibly to find some Mohammedan tracts; by the time he returned, she had scurried out of the house in search of a more likely prospect.

Two small boys were returning on a Glover Park bus from a shopping expedition, during which they had acquired a jigsaw puzzle consisting of a series of animal pictures with the name of each lettered below it. They spread the pieces on the bus seat and, kneeling on the floor, did their best to assemble it despite the jolting of the bus and some orthographic difficulties. The elephant seemed to stump until an interested fellow passenger set them right by explaining that the word does not begin with an "L."

Countess de Gramont Returns From France

Wife of Former Member of French Embassy Staff Makes Home Here as Husband Serves Gen. de Gaulle in England

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHILE HER HUSBAND is fighting with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French forces in England, Countess de Gramont, wife of a former member of the French Embassy staff here, is picking up the threads of her life in Washington.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

Just back from France, she and her three sons are making their home once more at 2230 Decatur place and watching the mails daily for word from Their Soldier at the front. By cable they have already learned that Count Gabriel de Gramont, who arrived in London early this month, has donned his new uniform (a British one, by the way, with French insignia to designate that he is with de Gaulle's forces) and is in the thick of the fight.

While it is not mine to tell, the account of how Count de Gramont employed a clever ruse to escape from his homeland after the German occupation is as fascinating a story as I have heard lately. Determined to join Gen. de Gaulle, he managed not only to get out of France, but to take his wife and children with him.

From a small southern town, near Biarritz, where they had a home, they escaped to Portugal. Count de Gramont took a plane to England from there and his family came to America on a Greek ship. Traveling thus, Countess de Gramont was sailing under colors of her native land. Originally, she hailed from Athens. Her husband, incidentally, is a great-great grandson of Victor Hugo, the noted author, and the title, Count de Gramont, has come down through many generations of one of France's most noted families.

Just what her future will be, Countess de Gramont does not know, of course. She would like to have permanent employment here to occupy her time, while her husband is fighting abroad. Meanwhile, her many friends here are welcoming her back and urging her to stay for the duration, at least; longer, if she will. Much slimmer than when her Washington friends last saw her, Countess de Gramont says she has lost 15 pounds in recent weeks.

Like many French families who had been in Paris in the early days of the war, Countess de Gramont and her children went south before the capital fell. Their home, like all others around it, were occupied by German soldiers. Seven stayed there during the final weeks the De Gramonts were in France.

CAPITAL SOCIAL FRONT: By the time Keith Officer wings off toward his new post in Tokyo, he will be ready for a nice long rest. Farewell parties for him are piling up by the minute, and it looks as if they are going to continue right up to the hour he takes off tomorrow night.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss entertained at a dinner in his honor last evening, the informal fete taking place at Dumbarton Oaks, their Georgetown home. Guests included a number of Mr. Officer's close friends.

Earlier yesterday, the popular retiring Australian counselor was feted at an informal cocktail party at the Belgian Embassy. He will be honored at a similar event this afternoon at which P. R. Heydon, second secretary of the Australian Legation, will be host. This evening, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, of the British Embassy, will gather in a few friends at dinner for Mr. Officer, and tomorrow night the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey will have a final farewell dinner for him.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Lionel Atwill has ceased setting dates for her departure for the West Coast. Just now, she is involved in a real estate hunt that is leaving her breathless and may result in her buying not one home—but three, all in Georgetown . . . Did you know that handsome car of hers once belonged to Robert Taylor? . . . And that her chauffeur, McCoy, is an Indian who has driven her hither and yon for 20 years? . . . Speaking of real estate, as I was a few lines back—the Shoellkopf house on Macomb street has been leased for the winter by Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, who had it a couple of seasons ago. Now at Port Washington, Long Island, they will be in town some time next month . . . Back in the Virginia hunt country are Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ward, jr. (she's the former Bettina Belmont), who have been in New York for some time. Now the guests of Mrs. Ward's mother, Mrs. Arthur White, at her home near Middleburg, they will soon move into their own place on the Pot House road.

Debs Swing It to Help Boys' Club

Mrs. Hagner Host At Tea Dance for Big Sisters Unit

To the tango, rhumba and conga, young Washington danced yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 in a candle-lit ballroom at Hotel 2400. Laurel and other fall flowers clustered in the window boxes and set off the big crystal punch bowl that dominated the long serving table at one end of the room.

Many of the guests found Osgood the Duck, who had his green-enclosed and gayly painted house in the room adjoining the ballroom, to be as unusual a guest of honor as they had ever met.

In the diffused amber light it was possible to glimpse on the dance floor Miss Marion Durbrow Venable and John L. Hargrove, jr., leading a vivacious conga, Miss Louise Stillwell and Stewart Labat, Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou and Sidney Kent, Miss Sita Finkenstaedt and Frank Holcomb, Miss Patricia Hill and Bill Sheldon, and Miss Billie Byrd West and James Campion.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

A LOVELY AND VERY hurried visitor to Washington recently was Mrs. Ian Wilson-Young, the former Charlotte Brown Nast. She arrived in the Capital early in the morning, having taken the midnight train from New York, breakfasted with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock at their house in Georgetown, and was off again after completing her arrangements to return to England on the Clipper tomorrow.

Charlotte, who as Mrs. Brown Nast, was one of the beauties of Washington society, has been living in London for the past few years. It was there that she and the popular former secretary of the British Embassy were married last winter, as Mr. Wilson-Young was transferred to the Foreign Office after his Washington post.

Mrs. Wilson-Young has been visiting her mother at Cooperstown New York for the past month but is now dashing back to the very center of the war to be with her husband. During her absence the Wilson-Young's house has been bombed and, though Ian wasn't hurt and has merely transferred his living quarters to a club, courageous Charlotte feels that she would rather worry about things on the spot than at a distance.

After saying goodbye to her exciting visitor, Martha Krock has settled down to getting her sons off to Kent School and to preparing her attractive house for the constant stream of friends who arrive from all directions and in all seasons. That in itself would seem to be the usual autumn routine for Washington matrons, but, knowing Martha, one can predict that she will do it with her own unusual grace and efficiency.

MRS. JOHN HINCKLEY came up to town yesterday from her place near Warrenton to shop for a wedding present for beautiful Mary Lou Marsh. She reports that she has spent the summer right at home and that she is full of joy at seeing her friends return from their far-off vacations as she has found the country rather lonely without them.

And, speaking of Mary Lou's marriage, there is a rumor, which I hope is true, that her fiance may take a job in Washington this winter and that the popular couple will be part of the Capital whirl.

Commander and Mrs. W. A. Heard asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon. A party at the Heards always gravitates to the famous Montmartre bar in the basement for there one finds an exact copy of a Paris sidewalk cafe, even to the cobbled streets and lamp posts. The walls are painted with scenes which take the onlooker across the ocean to the Paris of before-the-war and every detail of furnishing adds to the impression.

Helping her mother receive was the Heard's pretty daughter who had just completed her preparations for returning to Foxcroft School for a winter of study. Mary Lou Marsh stunning in a gray wool frock and matching turban, came in with her fiance, Kenneth Jenkins and the two of them were immediately the center of a group of well-wishing friends. Edward Gardner, who from now until after his niece's wedding, will probably be known simply as the "uncle of the bride" was on hand, beaming with pride as he watched his ward. Others present were Admiral and Mrs. John Towers, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Benjamin Plunkett of the British Embassy; Mrs. Noyes Lewis, looking most attractive after her recent slimming, the new British Assistant Naval Attache, and Mrs. Clark, and Col. and Mrs. Stewart-Richardson.

Mrs. Robert Pell gave a small luncheon at the Mayflower the other day in honor of Madame Georges Coulon. The guest of honor looked charming in a smart Paris tailleur of brown with a matching skull-cap on her curly hair. Among the ladies gathered to meet Madame Coulon were Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., just back from a trip to California and wearing a becoming red hat with her gray tweeds, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, and Mrs. George Howe.

Church Council Plans Series Of Doll Fairs

4 Daily Scheduled Oct. 7-11 in Different Sections of the City

By Suzanne

THE COUNCIL OF CHURCH WOMEN deals in dolls in an unusual way. It has found them cheerful little helpers in its program of kindliness and assistance to the needy children of the Capital. The dolls reach the hearts of little children and through them open the way for aid to many grownups. Hundreds have been given to little girls to make their summer vacations happy for the last several years.

Now the council plans to use dolls in a new way. A series of doll fairs is planned October 7-11, four fairs each day from 3 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m. in different sections of the city.

Dolls of all nations will be shown, including those from the rare collections owned by Washingtonians. Mrs. Harry W. Frantz will display the remarkable collection of world dolls she has at her home, 2901 Twenty-eighth street. Each of the 500 dolls included has a special significance. Among them is an Indian doll, presented by Gen. John J. Pershing. There are four that crossed the Pacific aboard the China Clipper on a press flight prior to the initiation of regular passenger service. There are dolls from czarist Russia with ermine capes and jeweled coiffures and countless others, each with a story of her own.

The Pan American Union is cooperating, providing dolls representing our Latin-American neighbors; there are rare old dolls from the Goodwill Industries collection; many from Mrs. Laura Waters' collection and others from the national office of the Junior Red Cross.

There also will be the group dressed by members of the council to represent the Presidents' wives in the Smithsonian Museum.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, is general chairman of the fairs. Committee chairmen in the various areas by whom she is being assisted are: Mrs. E. R. Bryan, Wesley Heights; Mrs. M. H. Mosier, Chevy Chase; Mrs. E. A. Back, Cleveland Park; Mrs. J. W. Graves, Anacostia; Mrs. John E. Jones, Brookland; Mrs. Ralph E. Parker, Dupont Circle; Miss Elizabeth DeSausseure, Georgetown; Mrs. E. E. Richardson, Congress Heights; Mrs. T. H. Young, Bloomingdale; Mrs. T. W. Marshall, Takoma Park; Mrs. Charles Green, Southeast; Mrs. Mary Wingate, Woodridge; Mrs. John H. Hicks, Central; Mrs. Wallace Streeter, Brightwood; Mrs. Sue Richwine, Petworth; Mrs. Eugene Fugitt, Southeast; Mrs. Howard Dozier, Silver Spring; Mrs. Elton H. Brown, Mount Rainier; Mrs. G. M. French, Alexandria. The Mount Pleasant and Northeast area chairmen are yet to be appointed.

Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the council is assisting in arrangements for the fairs.

MORE WAR WORK—The Soroptimist Club is one of the most active women's groups in the city war work with the exception of those organizations specifically for that purpose.

The club has already contributed 500 garments to "bundles for Britain," all cleaned, repaired and put in good condition. Mrs. Betty Jones, an active member of the club, and also a member of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies, has collected the clothes and carried on the project.

In addition, the local club has just voted $138 to be sent at once to the United States committee in charge of the evacuation of children of Soroptimists in Europe. This amount will pay for one child's entrance into this country and $50 is set aside as insurance against his becoming a public charge. The club also contributes $25 a month toward the maintenance fund of these children.

CONSTITUTION DAY—Yesterday, as a feature of the observance of Constitution Day by the District Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Lee W. Later Mr. Hunter spoke on "My Neighbor, George Washington," at ceremonies commemorating the day at the D. A. R. Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

OPEN SEASON—Delta Zeta alumnae chapter will open its season with a buffet supper at the home of Mrs. Charles P. Ryland, 4901 Massachusetts avenue northwest, tonight at 6:45. A business meeting to discuss plans for the year will follow.

Stokowski's Orchestra Back, Lauded for Good-Will Triumph

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Sept. 17.—Leopold Stokowski, founder and conductor of the All-American Youth Orchestra, returned today on the Moore-McCormack liner Argentina with the 100 young men and women musicians who, through their musical concerts in South America, had scored a great political triumph against Nazi influence, according to industrialists and businessmen arriving on the liner.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt greeted the silver-haired and exuberant Stokowski in his suite, after the Argentina was berthed. She was told that the youth concert tour had scored not only an artistic and financial success, but that American Ambassadors unanimously regarded the tour as of unprecedented political significance in counteracting Nazi influence.

The 20 attractive young women musicians, between the ages of 17 and 21—selected from 15,000 youthful musicians before they sailed on July 17, together wth the 80 capable but not so handsome young men—were greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her son, Franklin, jr.

When asked whether she was aware or shared the conviction of businessmen on the liner that the orchestra had scored such an unexpected political victory for the good neighbor policy, that even Secretary of State Hull reportedly had been cognizant of it, she replied:

"I should think that this orchestra, from what I have heard, couldn't help but have had the greatest influence on the cultured people of South America. For anything that has real culture means far more in the Latin American countries than it does sometimes in our own country.

"This orchestra also must have had a great influence on those who appreciate great music in South America. And it was something constructive that we could and did contribute in a cultural way. Yes, I should think it would be fine to send other cultural youth groups to South American countries," she added.

To Stokowski the highlight of the seven-week tour of South American countries was "the perfect discipline, and the amazingly high musical intelligence of this youth orchestra." He recalled that before they sailed they had been selected, after musical tests, from 15,000 applicants. "Normally, it takes 20 years to build a really fine orchestra. Well, these youths, through their incredible ability and amazing musical intelligence and ability to assimilate, were whipped into shape in two weeks;" he said.

But the bouncing, ever-smiling girls and youths, who had obtained $50 each as a minimum salary and had arrived broke, the highlight of the trip was "the fun we had and a century of musical knowledge learned from Mr. Stokowski, who was not half as temperamental or severe—except when we deserved it—as we had expected," reported Miss Betty Atkinson, voted by the ship's passengers as the most beautiful and "artistic" looking blonde on the liner.

Ramspeck Fears Civil Service Bill May Be Lost

By Edward Ryan

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, said yesterday his bill to extend the merit system was likely to be lost if it came up in the last hours of this Congressional session.

Ramspeck, speaking to 200 delegates at the United Federal Workers' convention in Almas Temple, said he had "pretty definite assurance" from Senate leaders that the bill would be considered at this session. He pointed out, however, that the present version differs from the House-approved bill. This difference, he said, might mean that the bill would be lost if it came up in the last hours of the coming adjournment rush.

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, who has been seeking to have the bill taken up in the Senate, will speak to the convention today, along with Representative Fries (Democrat), of Illinois, President Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission, and Elanor Nelson, U. F. W secretary-treasurer.

Roosevelt Sends Wishes

President Roosevelt sent "best wishes" to the convention, and called on its members for continued loyalty during the defense program.

His message, addressed to Jacob Baker, U. F. W. president, said:

"Please extend by best wishes for a successful and constructive convention to the delegates of the United Federal Wokes of America."

"Government workers have a real task before them in connection with the national defense program. I know they will do their job with the same high sense of patriotism and responsibility which has always characterized their loyal and devoter efforts in the public interest."

Allegiance Pledged

Later the delegates shouted their approval of two resolutions, declaring their "unqualified loyalty and complete allegiance to the United States of America, its institutions and its Government," and pledging "unqualified support" to the C. I. O. in a drive to "organize the many thousands of unorganized workers in the Government service."

Ramspeck said that he had twice served as a Government employe under the "spoils system" and found that "you cannot have an efficient public service under patronage." He told the delegates he hoped that before their convention was over the Senate would take up the Ramspeck bill and pass it, "so we can eliminate the spoils system in the Federal service." The convention ends tomorrow.

Ramspeck declared that Government workers should "put their house in order" by preparing to pay more for their civil service retirement benefits, or else expect the system to be taken over by the Social Security Board.

Hard to Explain

He said it was becoming more difficult for Congressmen to explain to their constituents why a $2,000-a-year Government worker could get a $1,200-a-year retirement annuity and pay but 25 per cent of the cost, while private employes paying the same amount could get only half as large an annuity under Social Security.

He said a "golden opportunity" to secure a more liberal retirement plan for Government workers had been lost last year by opposition of a few groups who objected to increasing employe retirement payments from 3½ to 5 per cent of their salary.

Ramspeck told the convention that the present National Administration had done more for Federal and private workers than any other Administration, and charged that there are influential men in the United States who would like to use the defense emergency as a lever to take away the beneficial legislation of the past seven years.

Resigned Over Draft Stand

Baker praised what the Roosevelt Administration had done to improve personnel practices in the Government service. A report of the U. F. W. officers, however, told the delegates that the Postoffice Depoartment, Federal Housing Authority, Veterans Administration, and Bureau of Prisons, were among agencies which had sought to "discourage unions."

Meanwhile, four employes of the WPA disclosed that they had resigned from their U. F. W. local in protest against a resolution of their local executive committee opposing passage of the draft bill. The employes, Floyd Dell, Corinne Frazier Gillette, Norman Fitts, and Benjamin Ginsburg, told Kenneth Decker, president of the WPA local, that the resolution "was the latest in a series of instances in which a small group has undertaken to commit the union to a stand on political questions without full consultation."

Property Is Called Keystone of Rights

Lashly Addresses 200 at Meeting of D. C. Bar Association

The responsibility of the bar is "to see that the Government's regulation of the use of property is made with justice and regularity," Jacob M. Lashly, newly elected president of the American Bar Association, last night told the District Bar Association.

Justice, he declared in a speech that drew a standing ovation from about 200 District lawyers at the Mayflower Hotel, is the "very spiritual essence of the bill of rights and is coequal with freedom of speech and assembly."

Quotes Van Orsdel

Lashly quoted from a decision of the late Josiah A. Van Orsdel, justice of the Court of Appeals, who declared in effect, he said, that of the three Constitutional guarantees of life, liberty and property, the greatest is property, and that, historically, the failure of government to preserve property has resulted in anarchy, a state in which neither life nor liberty can be preserved.

Admitting the right of government to restrict the use of property, tempered by justice, Lashly contended that the Nation today is governed by pressure groups whose desires are gained by trading and whose "materialism makes it difficult to see through to the spiritual essence of the Constitution."

During his speech—one of the first he has made as president of the American Bar—Lashly defined justice both as "liberty in action" and a "spiritual property that has nothing to do with the distribution" of wealth.

"Divorce Mill" Disclosed

From a report prepared by the association's committee on the unauthorized practice of law, the association learned of the operation of quick-action "divorce mill" by a disbarred attorney posing as the divorce agent of notable persons.

The attorney, the report declared, cites divorce cases involving James J. Walker, former New York mayor; Lady Ashley, wife of Douglas Fairbanks, and Jean Lowell writer, as indicative of his ability.

In advertisements readers were advised that under recently enacted statutes, divorces might be secured in 60 days.

Litigation Weighed

Richard L. Merrick, chairman of the committee, told the association that litigation in the case might be necessary.

A special committee, headed by William E. Richardson, proposed that the association open its law library in the District courthouse to women and colored attorneys, at present barred. The report will be acted upon at the association's October meeting.

Lashly was guest of honor at a dinner given by the association's board of directors before the meeting. His first address as president of the American Bar was made yesterday at a luncheon of the Federal Bar Association and the Inter-American Bar Association at the Army and Navy Club.

G. W. Prepares Defense Quiz

Students and faculty members of George Washington University will be asked to fill out forms revealing in what way each can make his greatest contribution to the national defense program, it was announced at the school yesterday.

Submitted information will be regarded as confidential and will not commit students to enrollment for any special training, it was said. The questionnaire also asks students to suggest special courses which the university might offer to help in national defense.

D. C. Engineer Urges Better Crossing Signs

Seattle, Sept. 17 (AP).—A railroad man told the American Association of State Highway Officials today that a third of last year's railroad crossing accidents occurred because motorists ran into the side of trains.

J. G. Brennan, Washington, D. C., grade crossing engineer for the American Association of Railroads, urged improved highway signs as one solution of the railroad-highway crossing problem.

Brennan spoke in the place of Congressman Wilburn Cartwright, of Oklahoma, chairman of the House Committee on Roads, who canceled his trip West to attend the funeral of Speaker Bankhead.

Poundmaster To Defy Order To Kill Dogs

Spitz Dies of Rabies After Leaving There; Health Aide Alarmed

Health Officer George C. Ruhland last night said he would approve a recommendation by the chief of the division of preventable diseases to destroy all dogs at the D. C. Pound to prevent a possible outbreak of rabies.

It developed that a spitz which was purchased at the pound September 3 by a local family and taken to Maine died there after biting a child. A laboratory test showed the dog had rabies, Ruhland said.

Dr. James G. Cumming, head of the preventable disease bureau, in his recommendation to Dr. Ruhland said "while there is doubt that the dog was capable of transmitting the disease to other dogs at the pound there is that possibility."

Frank B. Marks, poundmaster, when informed of the recommendation last night, declared he "would kill no dogs."

He said the spitz, a male, was brought to his pound with a female spitz by a family which could not afford two license tags.

"They were such good dogs I put them in a separate pen and the only contact they had with the other dogs was for a little while when they were first brought into the pound," he said.

In answer to Dr. Cumming's recommendation that all dogs exposed be destroyed and that those sold to the public be recalled and destroyed, Marks said "it'll take a commissioners' order to make me do this."

Marks said there are about 50 dogs at the pound now but that none of them was there when the spitz was penned.

Bicyclist, Pedestrian Injured in Collision

George Outlaw, colored, 58, knocked down by the bicycle in front of his home at 1306 Forty-ninth street northeast, was admitted to the hospital with a fractured collar bone and a possible brain concussion.

Leo Brooks, colored, 18, of 4832 Meade street northeast, thrown from his bicycle, was admitted with a possible brain concussion and arm and knee bruises.

Rats Don't Know It Yet, but October 16 Is Their Doomsday

The Mothers' Health Club of Temple Center, civic organization of central Washington, last night set October 16 as the opening day of their drive against the neighborhood's rats in a meeting at Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N streets northwest.

Mrs. Albert Fenderson, president, said the group on that day will send circulars to householders in an area of ten blocks telling them of the distribution of rat poison free of charge. The poison will be distributed from door to door by older children of club members on a day to be set after October 16.

Meanwhile, a Post reader contributed a recipe for a poison he had devised to assist the cause.

The new boldness of District rats yesterday inspired Salvatore Scalco, of 705 Otis place northwest, to make public a recipe which he says no rodent can survive.

Ingredients in the fatal compound are corn meal, granulated sugar and plaster of Paris, mixed in equal parts. The dish turns into concrete as soon as the rat tops it off with a drink of water, according to Scalco.

"I've been using it 25 years and it really works okay," he said. He telephoned in his formula after reading in The Post that District civic groups were planning an anti-rat campaign.

floor but water from the hose of the post fire company and two Alexandria fire companies swept through other floors as well.

Smoke billowing from the dormer windows of the attic-like third story, which contains a shooting range and storage room for athletic equipment and soldiers' personal belongings, was first noticed by Sergt. Joseph Suponcic and Corpl. Francis T. Manning as they returned from mess.

"We ran up and opened the door," said Sergt. Suponcic. "Thick smoke kept us from seeing anything. Then there was a flash of flames. We yelled 'fire.'"

A board of inquiry immediately began an investigation. The blaze was extinguished in an hour.

Maj. Heston Cole, executive officer, told The Post it possibly was started by overheated kitchen range ventilators. He scouted the likelihood of sabotage, pointing out that nothing of great military value was stored in the barracks and that post storage buildings are about a mile away.

The barracks, which houses Co. B, of the Fifth Engineers, stands in a quadrangle of colonial-style brick barracks buildings, several not more than 25 feet from the burning structure, but none of these was threatened.

Residents a mile from the fort reported they could see the glow of flames, but no fire broke through the roof. Rafters were charred and equipment destroyed.

The blaze occurred only a week after fire destroyed a two-story barracks at Fort Washington, Md., which a short time previously had been turned over to the National Park Service.

Dragged from the blinding smoke by fellow soldier-firefighters, the men overcome yesterday were rushed by post ambulances to the hospital, where they were listed as:

Carlton Allen, 19, Julius Piros, 19, Amel Rusnak, 24, Frank Kissling, 21, Joseph Domasinsky, 18, and Joseph Albrick, 26, all of Company B, Fifth Engineers; Harold Lucas, 20, of Company B, 80th Quartermaster; Charles Nolan, 20, of the Ordnance Detachment, and James E. Victory, 21, of Company C, Fifth Engineers.

Julius Brayer, of the Headquarters and Service Company, was treated for smoke in the eyes and dismissed, according to Sergt. John A. Yuhas, in charge of quarters.

Adam Rhan Dies in River After Collision

Heart Attack Fatal To Bookbinder as Powerboat Hits Skiff

Adam Rhan, 59, of 6920 Willow street northwest, died of a heart attack while struggling in the water early yesterday after collision between a powerboat and a fishing skiff in the Patuxent River off Solomon's Island, Md.

His one-armed companion, W. B. Sandborn, of Takoma Park, held onto an anchor chain until he was hauled aboard the powerboat.

The men were fishing from a skiff off Drum Point when they were struck by the powerboat W. J. Matthews of Gloucester Point, Va., commanded by Capt. J. E. Jordan. The Matthews was bound for Baltimore carrying lumber.

Both men were employed by the Seventh Day Adventist publishing house. Mr. Rhan was a bookbinder and Sanborn is a printer.

According to witnesses, Rhan was thrown from the skiff, but Sanborn grabbed the larger boat's anchor chain. Rhan was seen to clasp his hand to his chest as he reached for a roap thrown to him and then sink.

Dr. Page C. Jett, Calvert County acting medical examiner, ascribed death to a heart attack. Rhan's body was sent to Takoma Park, where the funeral will be held Friday at 2 p. m. in the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

Mr. Rhan, who came to Takoma Park, D. C., 28 years ago, leaves his wife, Minnie G., and a son, Theodore.

Hitler's Horoscope To Be Discussed

Grant, of the Washington Astrological Association, at a meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Raleigh Hotel. The astrological chart was first presented by Lieut. Comdr. Walter M. Wynne, U. S. N., at last week's convention of the American Federation of Scientific Astrologers in Chicago.

Grant returned yesterday from the convention, at which he was elected to the presidency of the national organization for the third successive year. Baptist Youth Union Marks 21st Birthday

Pageantry, Worship And Gospel Singing Feature Program

The twenty-first birthday of the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions was celebrated last night with pageantry, worship and gospel singing.

Packing Fifth Baptist Church on E street, between Sixth and Seventh streets southwest, more than 500 people, including 331 youths from 22 unions, applauded as John Ruthven, second president of the federation, sliced the birthday cake which opend the ceremonies.

Shortly afterward, as the drama of the federation's progress unfolded, Ruthven, Thomas Wilson, former president, and others told of its organization on September 1, 1919, at West Washington Baptist Church, Georgetown, and the growth of its program of stewardship, worship, service and fellowship through the years.

Twenty members from the host church, Second, Clarendon (Va.) and Fifth Baptist Churches attended that initial meeting, the pageant recalled, and the first formal session was held on September 27, 1919, with H. E. Dameron, of Fifth Church, as first president. Today there are more than 1,000 members in 27 unions.

Others participating in the pageant—all from First Baptist Church, were Lila Mae Jerman, Charles Morgan, Clara Belle Moore, Harold Carter, Norman Deanne Jerman, Dorothy Johnson, Hattie Phillips and Jewell Carter. Wilson was author; Evangeline Claspell, director, and Zoeth Phillips, stage manager.

Martha Moss, June Pyne, Kemper Simmons and Robert Hoffman portrayed the characters of the prologue.

Earlier in the program, Miss Nellie Fike, Federation president, read a testimonal poem honoring Ruthven, First Baptist churchman, lauding his "usefulness to local unions and his consecrated service." Before coming to Washington, Ruthven was for years active in Federated Baptist youth work in Chicago. He retired as local Federation president in 1927.

Robert Sammons, of Calvary Baptist Union, Federation recreational chairman, presented trophies to Virginia Kanode and Herbert Christopherson, of Metropolitan Baptist Church, whose unit won the Federation girls' and boys' tennis tournaments.

Haley Scurlcok, Federation worship chairman, led a devotional period; Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, gave the benediction, and the Rev. Herrick Hall, music minister and junior pastor of Fifth Church, conducted a song service.

Successor Sought For Col. Oehmann

The Commissioners yesterday revealed they were considering a successor for Col. John W. Oehmann, director of inspection, who may be called into Army service soon because of his position as commanding officer of the 121st Engineers of the District National Guard.

The successor would serve only for the period Col. Oehmann was away. The Commissioners said several District officials are being considered for the post. Col. Oehmann yesterday said he had no knowledge when the call for duty would come but it will be in the "near future."

The department of inspection embraces the divisions of building inspection, plumbing, electrical and smoke inspection.

Schoolmates Help Missionary Priest

The Rev. Andrew Vernon Graves' former schoolmates at Gonzaga High School last night rallied to the support of his mission in the Carolina mountains—by staging a benefit party in the St. Aloysius' school hall, North Capitol and I streets.

Father Graves' mission, unsupported by missionary or other church societies, has its headquarters at Marshall, N. C., and covers a 750-mile area. He entered the Jesuit Order shortly after graduation from Gonzaga in 1922 and was assigned to the mission about five years ago after serving as assistant pastor of Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown.

Crash Squad Begins Duty On Sunday

6 Cars, 32 Men Assigned to Probe All Traffic Accidents in D. C.

Police Inspector Arthur Miller's accident investigation unit will begin full time operation Sunday at 8 a. m., he announced yesterday following approval by the District Commissioners.

A staff of 32 policemen, including a detective sergeant from police headquarters, three police sergeants and 28 privates, all trained in accident investigation, will take to the streets in an effort to decrease Washington's toll of traffic deaths.

Held up for some weeks by the Commissioners, the plan called for an increase from the three-car fourteen-man squad to six cars and 32 men. The six cars will be used throughout the three shifts.

Call Chief Brown

The Commissioners yesterday called in Police Chief Earnest W. Brown to justify the increases requested by Inspector Miller were satisfied with his replies.

Detective Sergt. W. J. Liverman will be assigned to the squad although he will continue to work out of headquarters. The three sergeants assigned are A. B. Clark, T. E. Edwards, both night inspectors, and T. T. Heffernan, a foot sergeant in the traffic division.

The first squad of eight men will report to duty at headquarters at 8 a. m. Sunday for the 8 a. m.-4 p. m. shift; 8 more men will report at 4 p. m. for the 4 p. m.-midnight shift; four men will report at midnight to work until 8 a. m.; four men will come on at 10 a. m. to work through 6 p. m. and four men will report at 6 p. m. for duty until 2 a. m.

The privates will require one car for each of the three platoons and each sergeant will be assigned to a car, in the various shifts.

Cover All Accidents

The men assigned to this unit will enforce all laws and regulations and will proceed to all accidents and relieve scout car men or footmen of the investigation. Inspector Miller stated the "crash" unit will not reduce the police patrol service of the department as the same number of men will be on duty as heretofore, but under a different assignment of accident investigation.

Assignment of the cars to precincts will be based on statistics of accidents and fatalities. The cars will be assigned to localities where the largest number of accidents and fatalities have occurred.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

A HORROR STORY of an ordinary man's disintegration, "The Fugitive" opens at the Little Theater this morning after a public preview last evening. Originally titled "On the Night of the Fire," it is an English film with Ralph Richardson and Diana Wynyard in the leads and artful direction that builds its events with a forceful crescendo.

The horror isn't of the knockabout variety. It's of the subtle mental sort which Hugh Walpole employed so vigorously in a collection of short stories titled "All Hallows Eve," one of which was to become the play "Kind Lady." The leading character, played by Ralph Richardson, is a middle-class barber in an English coastal town—very likely drab Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

We see our barber, Will Cobling, walking down a street. There is a window open in a mill. On a cashier's desk there is a wad of money. The barber stops, hesitates, climbs in, pockets the money and goes home. Later we see him taking his wife for a pleasant shopping spree. It's a novelty to them and their small daughter. A happy family, they have enjoyed their afternoon.

Why should this respectable man wish to rob? The key lies in his wife's sister and her husband, a successful pugalist, a happy chap who can buy a sleek car, furs for his wife, a brighter life than the confines of the barber's neighborhood.

But he has left a clue behind him. A button. His wife, asked to sew on his coat button, pieces together the terrifying evidence, burns the remaining buttons. When she gently lets her husband learn that she knows his secret, he tells her that now they can leave the drabness about them. But no. She owes a neighboring shopkeeper most of the money for setting up a wardrobe which cheered her when she needed cheering.

This shopkeeper is the deus ex machina of the case. A suspicious man, he threatens them with blackmail. There is a great fire in the nearby quarter which threatens their street. Unobserved, our barber confronts the blackmailer, kills him, a murder which would have been undisclosed had the fire gutted the street. But it doesn't and the balance of the film shows us a man's gradual breakdown.

Also on the Little screen is a brief version of the Jimmy Durante-Richard Tauber-Oscar Straus film, "Forbidden Music," wherein Master Durante is forbidden much footage and tenor Tauber sings some typical Oscar Strauss waltz time. It's poor musical comedy, but "The Fugitive," which the meddlers might better have left its original English title, "The Night of the Fire," is an engrossing and terrifying film.

Yesterday's preview of "The Return of Frank James" disclosed one stirringly thoughtful touch in which Twentieth Century-Fox makes what must have been a fearfully expensive salute to the Washington Redskins. This reporter would prefer to believe that the print Washington will get of this rollicking yarn has been especially designed for local use and anyone who says otherwise can meet him in the alley behind The Post. What's this all about? Well, the music introducing and punctuating "The Return of Frank James" is none other than Barnee's "Hail to the Redskins."

Monday means not only the opening of the National. It's the night of the Variety Club's benefit at the Armstrong-Furr fight in Griffith Stadium. The club's take at the gate goes to its welfare fund. Sidney Lust has a few choice seats left and he'll be glad to hear NAtional 4274 ring with requests for them.

PICKING UP THE LOOSE ENDS: Keith's will open the Rosalind Russell-Brian Aherne comedy, "Hired Wife" Friday morning. The new "March of Time" release, "On Foreign Newsfronts" also will be on the bill . . . Personal Aside to "Indignant Guild Subscriber:" You've probably read this column's strong protest at the loss of "Twelfth Night." So strong was that protest that it started all our phones ringing with the New York Theater Guild on the other end. They assure us that Miss Hayes will be along later in the season.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 17.

HARRY HOPKINS: The next member of the White House inner circle to resign from his Government post will be Tommy Corcoran, of the Corcoran-Cohen team. Tommy will quit the job he has held with the RFC for eight years, and the announcement probably will be made this week. He will join the new committee Mayor LaGuardia is organizing for the reelection of Roosevelt. . . . STANDARD OIL CO.: The directors of one of your foremost competitors are pondering over a change of corporate name. . . . LUCIUS BOOMER: Jose Maria Sert, who decorated the Sert Room at your Waldorf-Astoria, is getting a bid from Hermann Goering—who wants him to redecorate his famed country estate, Karin Hall.

LYONS

JIMMY HINES: Lawyers in Albany are wagering that the Court of Appeals will dispose of your case in this way: the dismissal of the felony counts, and the affirmation of the misdeamor counts. Inasmuch as sentence was suspended on the misdemeanor counts, this would mean freedom for you. . . . LORD LOTHIAN: Beatrice Lillie sent a cable from London Sunday. It read: "I'm all right—but please send a pair of ear-stoppers.' . . . . EQUITY: Sinclair Lewis, who gave promise of becoming such a good actor, never again will emote from behind footlights. Lewis said that from now on his only interest in the theater will be limited to writing for it. . . . H. B. SWOPE: When plans for the new racetrack at Flushing are completed, the track will be called Greentree Park, in honor of Jock Whitney's mother, who owns the Greentree Stables.

ASCAP: The new song being played at the Cafe Pierre by Bob Knight's orchestra is called "I Love You So Much, I Do." The author is Peggy Hopkins Joyce—and this is her first attempt at song writing . . . Ed Flynn: Tom Dewey will supply the Republican National Committee with a new story concerning Dutch Schultz . . . Fifth Avenue Association" Salvador Dali, the surrealist artist who won headlines by jumping through the window of a Fifth avenue department store, has received an unusual commission from the Spanish government. It's a bas-relief job, to be done along 30 miles of road. Dali will begin it by showing the skeletons of horses and men, and the figures at the end of the 30-mile stretch will show the same horses and men, fully embodied.

JOHN D. M. HAMILTON: A New Yorker I know, with $100,000 to bet, is offering 2-to-1 odds on Roosevelt. . . . POLICE COM. VALENTINE: Walter Conselo, the radio actor, was beaten by three panhandlers in front of Rockefeller Center a few days ago. His injuries were so severe that he couldn't make his scheduled broadcast—as the gangster in "District Attorney." . . . MONTY WOOLLEY: Alexander Wollcott has recovered so quickly, he'll be in town this week, and will participate in the Presidential campaign . . . LANA TURNER: Artie Shaw has discovered a new way of giving vent to the impulses he feels. Artie gave a song plugger $5, in return for Shaw's being permitted to throw a whole blackberry pie into his face.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 17 (INS).—Just as I was leaving the house for the airport, word came that Don Ameche and Paramount had settled their $170,000 lawsuit filed when Don walked out of "The Night of January 16th." New York or no New York, I dashed back into the house, checked up on the story and learned that not only Don and Y. Frank Freeman had let bygones be bygones, but that the popular Twentieth Century-Fox actor has been signed to co-star with Mary Martin in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye."

PARSONS

Bette Davis writes friends that it's cold in New Hampshire—but that she isn't envying the Hollywood swimming pool because she feels so peppy. There have been lots of guesses about La Davis' movie line-up, and here it is straight from Hal Wallis. Phyllis Bottome's "Danger Signal" has been purchased for Bette by Warners. Miss Bottome, you recall, authored the sensational "The Mortal Storm," but her "Danger Signal" is not a Nazi opus. It is the story of a woman struggling out of the meshes of insanity and should give Bette a great dramatic characterization. She does these morbid things wonderfully well—so it's with a faint little voice that I'd like to suggest that the fans might like to see the great Davis in a comedy. Bette, of course, stars in "January Heights" first.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Franchot Tone has been giving Bonnie Kildare, brunette beauty at the Florentine Gardens, a "beeg" rush; Mrs. Jack Oakie, who has been so critically ill her life was despaired of, is out of danger. She will be able to come home from the hospital next week; you can imagine the excitement at the House of Murphy when Greta Garbo, Gaylord Hauser, Sir Charles and Lady Mendl, Barbara Hutton, Cary Grant and Lady Joan Moore all walked in as dinner guests of Ossip Prenicoff. All of them were in evening dress excepting Garbo, who wore a brown tweed suit and felt hat; later at the Jack Warners it was interesting to see Sylvia Fairbanks and Mary Pickford deep in conversation. Mary and Buddy Rogers were dinner guests at the Warners.

Guy Lombardo will sing over the air "Nights in Bombay," written by Rose Davies and Neville Fleeson; George Reeves, Warners' stock player, and Eleanor Needles, of Cincinnati, will be married Saturday; Helen Vinson and Lew Ayres continue to find each other good company; Bing Crosby, who is one of Hollywood's most untidy dressers, was pleased and amused when his dad, Harry Crosby, was chosen as one of the community's best dressers; Wednesday nights from now on at Victor Hugo's will be given over to radio favorites. Among those who will entertain this week are Dick Powell, Don Wilson, Burns and Allen; Queenie Vassar (Mrs. Joseph Cawthorne) and Joe are back after a summer in the East. Queenie looks like a million; the Charles Laughtons have gone to New York via Union Pacific.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Sept. 17.

Harsh words have been said about me by some of our English actors and Americans, too, because I've been honest enough to hint in a subtle sort of way that perhaps it might be a good idea if some of our Britishers joined their colors and started fighting for their country before it's too late. Well, listen to what the London Sunday Graphic says about Errol Flynn: "Flynn fights for freedom, but it's 1585. Despite the fact that he's busy obtaining American naturalization papers, Flynn still finds time to fight heroically for Britain—on the screen. Mr. Flynn looks very well in tights, and handles a rapier with an air that suggests he fights better than he acts. The sea fight is simply amazing."

HOPPER

Lou Merrill, one of the most versatile and busiest actors in radio, has been on the Lux Theater for the last five years, which is directed by Cecil B. DeMille. Now, after all this time, he's getting his big break in pictures at Metro—all because of a rabid, rousing rib, and not because he's one of the finest actors we've got in Hollywood. For the last three months Dore Schary has been writing the screenplay "Simon Bolivar of Bolivia," and he's taken his work so seriously that his pals decided he needed some fun. So they got Lou to come to Mrs. Schary's birthday party posing as an attache of the Bolivian government to pass on the merits of the story.

Of course Lou said the word "revolution" was neither to be mentioned in the script nor to take place in the film. Well, Schary sweated for 45 minutes and so did Lou, 'cause he'd never done anything like this before. When his friends couldn't see either of them suffer any longer, they broke in on the story conference and said it was all a gag. Lou's acting was so perfect that Schary is writing him in as a member of the Bolivian government. And once he gets on that lot, they'll never let him go—he's that good.

When Helen Broderick started work in "No, No, Nanette," Director Tay Garnett sent her the following wire: "Don't let Brod's success go to your head. Keep pitching. Just ride on your own reputation." She wired back: "Tried to pay my taxes on Brod's reputation. No go. I'm still working."

Mrs. Will Rogers is opening her home for three months for the benefit of the Red Cross, and in their living room, where I've sat many times, you'll see all the mementoes which Bill gathered together during a busy and remarkable lifetime—saddles, statuary, autographed photographs with every noted man in America, more keys to more cities than you ever dreamed there were. And Mrs. Rogers' own story about her husband's life starts in the Saturday Evening Post in October. Oh, how we need him now.

In a scene for "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," Carole Lombard had to shave Bob Montgomery. As she spoke her lines, the razor skidded southward on Bob's throat. "I have it in my contract," said he "that you can't take out my appendix!"

FIRE FROM BOMB BLASTS PAINTED THIS SILHOUETTE IN LONDON AS GERMAN AIR RAID WAS IN PROGRESS Associate Press Wirephoto from Paramount News

Defense... Shine for Willkie...

An 8-foot steel and barbed-wire stockade is rising around historic Fort Myer.

The fence—the first in the memory of the oldest troopers—was started at the south gate, its steel poles and heavy wire strands glinting next to the old blackened cannons hat flank the gateway.

Already steel poles have been driven into the ground along the post's boundary as far as the riding hall. Wire ened cannons that flank the gateway.

A curious feature of the fence is that the barbed-wire segment capping the stockade bends inward rather than outward.

At the fort yesterday, Maj. J. H. Collier said that there had been several instances of children sneaking into the reservation and causing mischief. Besides what's unusual about an Army post having a fence? he asked—particularly in emergencies.

Three hundred women supporters of the Willkie-McNary ticket gathered yesterday in the Willard Hotel for a campaign pep luncheon. They were guests of the women's membership committee of the District Willkie-McNary Campaign Club.

There was considerable delay before the luncheon got underway because accommodations had been made for only about 100 guests.

Rufus S. Lusk, advocate of local suffrage, told the women that with rearmament the principal issue in both campaigns is: "It's going to take a businessman to carry out the job." And because Willkie is a businessman "from the ground up," he is the logical one for the task, Lusk added.

"Businessmen the country over have confidence in Wendell Willkie," Lusk said. "He speaks their language without a Harvard accent."

At the conclusion of speeches and pep talks from various members of the committee, three youngsters—Julie, 13, and Patricia Pond, 9, and Eunice Carlson, 13—appeared at the speakers' table with $20 in donations received by their "Junior Willkie Club." Most of the contributions were received from guests of the Burlington Hotel, where the girls live.

"PENTHOUSE" (ABOVE BROKEN LINE) BEING BUILT ON NAVY BUILDING. IT WAS FROM HERE THAT WORKMAN FELL YESTERDAY TO HIS DEATH

Montford Godfrey, 31, of 410 Sixth street northwest, was killed yesterday when he fell three floors from the Navy Department Building, Eighteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest, where an additional story is being built to accommodate expanded defense personnel.

Godfrey, an ironworker, was on the roof of Wing 7, directing the movement of a crane when the hoist's load struck him and knocked him over the edge. He landed on his head, fellow-workers said, and he was dead when an Emergency Hospital doctor arrived.

A certificate of accidental death was issued by the coroner.

Tigers Beat Nats, 6-3, Regain League Lead

Rowe Scores 15th Victory, Injures Arm

Schoolboy Retires In 6th; Masterson Wild, Detroit Gets Four Runs in First

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, Sept. 17.—Detroit's pennant-scenting Tigers shuttled back into the American League lead today, taking advantage of the Nats' presence in the city to score a 6-3 victory.

The Tigers had the help also of the Philadelphia Athletics who were slapping down the Indians at Cleveland simultaneously with the Detroit triumph. By a half-game margin the Tigers took over the league lead.

To the delight of 5,655 Detroit fans, the Tigers removed most of the suspense from today's affair with the Nats by scoring all of their six runs in the first three innings.

Fifteenth For Schoolboy

It was Schoolboy Rowe's fifteenth victory of the year but perhaps a costly one for the Tigers. Rowe complained of soreness in his arm in the third and was removed in the sixth.

Actually, the Nats outhit the Tigers, 7 to 6, but a damaging error by Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl and a ghastly spell of wildness that overcame young Walter Masterson at the outset placed the game beyond reclaim by Washington.

Then Rudy Homered

In the first inning, the Tigers made one hit—and four runs. Masterson walked three batters, forced one run across the plate, and then saw three more eventuate after Pofahl muffed a double play grounder off Higgins' bat.

Two innings later, Rudy York increased Rowe's working margin with his twenty-ninth homer of the year—into the centerfield stands with Greenberg on base due to a walk.

Two of the Nats' three runs were produced by Jake Early, who swatted a home run into the right centerfield stands in the second inning after Pofahl had singled with one out. They came up with another run in the eighth after George Case had led off with a double.

The Nats rallied mildly in the ninth when Bartell's muff of Sanford's error and a walk to Pofahl put runners on with one out, but early hit into a force play and Pinch-hitter Buddy Myer's long drive was dragged down on the run by Pete Fox in front of the rightfield wall.

Monteagudo Shines

Little Rene Monteagudo kept the Nats in the ball game by pitching shutout ball after relieving Masterson at the end of the third inning. The diminutive Cuban shut the Tigers out, allowing only three hits, but his efforts were wasted in the light of the Nats' helplessness at bat.

The first three men to face Masterson reached base. Bartell led off with a single, and walks to McCosky and Gehringer filled the bases. In this crisis, Masterson fanned Greenberg, but he walked York to force a run home. Higgins drove a grounder to Pofahl who permitted the ball to roll through his legs, and two more runs scored. York, who reached third on the muff, crossed the plate on Fox's infield out.

Nats Push Off For Crucial Series With Cleveland

Detroit, Sept. 17.—The Nats entrained tonight for Cleveland where they open a crucial series tomorrow with the Indians—crucial for the Indians.

A double-header will usher in the three-game series in which the Indians will be faced with the best pitching the Nats can muster. Ken Chase and Sid Hurson will be the Washington pitchers in the twin bill, and Dutch Leonard will go to the mound in the third game.

Their pitching staff weary from a succession of double-headers, the Indians will rely on two second-flight hurlers in tomorrow's twin bill. Joe Dobson will be Chase's opponent and Johnny Allen will take the mound against Hudson.

The final game, on Thursday, is expected to pit Bob Feller against Leonard.

Dodgers' Fiery Manager Lost 5 Days, Also Is Fined $100 After 'Battle of Brooklyn;' Fan Who Socked Umpire Goes Back to Jail

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 17.—This was a sad day in Flatbush. The Dodgers lost their fiery leader, Lippy Leo Durocher, for the next five days and the solid support of one of their most faithful fans, pudgy little Frankie Gernano, for the rest of the year as an aftermath of the "battle of Brooklyn" yesterday at Ebbets Field.

President Ford Frick of the National League slapped a $100 fine on Durocher and suspended him because of "prolonged argument and conduct tending to incite "riot" during yesterday's Brooklyn-Cincinnati game. Under Frick's edict Durocher won't be allowed to manage until Sunday.

But for Gernano the baseball season is over. The minitature Tony Galento who rushed on the field after the game and slugged big George Magerkurth, the umpire who called a decision against his beloved Dodgers, is going back to the New York State vocational institution at West Coxackie, N. Y., for violating his parole on a simple larceny charge.

Hero in Flatbush

In the light of today's events Gernano, a 21-year-old unemployed truck driver, made a serious blunder in calling Magerkurth a "lousy robber." Those words came back to haunt the fat little Brooklyn fan in Flatbush court when he was arraigned on a charge of assaulting Magerkurth. A parole officer appeared in court with a warrant charging Gernano had violated his parole which did not expire until January 12, 1941.

Magistrate George H. Folwell remanded Gernano to the Tombs to await transfer to the West Coxackie institution to serve out his sentence. The hearing of the assault charge was adjourned indefinitely. By the time Gernano gets out of the reformatory, Magerkurth will be back in his home at Moline, Ill., and may not see fit to come East to press the charges.

To many Brooklyn fans Gernano, a 198-pounder, was a hero for attacking the 245-pound Magerkurth. They cheered him when he was taken away from Ebbets Field by plain-clothesmen. The authorities, fearing that Dodger fans might attempt to storm the courtroom on behalf of Gernano, stationed 20 extra police around the court to preserve order.

Durocher Raved, Ranted

The "battle of Brooklyn" grew out of a boot by Dodger Second Baseman Pete Coscarart. With the score tied, 3-3, in the tenth inning, Coscarart dropped a throw from Shortstop Johnny Hudson on Frank McCormick's almost certain double-play grounder which should have ended the inning. As Coscarart took the throw, Umpire Bill Stewart called the Cincinnati runner going into second out and whirled to watch the approaching play at first. But as Stewart turned Cascarart dropped the ball. On an appeal from Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds, Stewart asked Magerkurth, stationed at third, for his judgment on whether Coscarart dropped the ball before having complete possession or when he started to throw. Magerkurth ruled that Coscarart booted the ball.

In the ensuing argument Durocher raved and ranted all over the field. Magerkurth ordered him off the field but had trouble making him leave. Durocher's performance whipped up the wrath of the Dodger fans. And when the Reds scored the winning run on the next play, the fans blamed Magerkurth for the defeat of their idols.

Sports Writer Collapses After Tribe-Mack Game

Cleveland, Sept. 17 (AP).—James C. Isaminger, sports writer for the Philadelphia Inquirer, collapsed outside Cleveland Stadium after the Indians-Athletics baseball game today and was taken to Lutheran Hospital, where his condition was described as critical.

Dr. W. L. Thompson said Isaminger, who had been suffering from high blood pressure, was stricken by a cerebral hemorrhage which caused paralysis of the left side.

"He may or may not recover," Dr. Thompson said, "but in any event it is unlikely he ever will get back to normal again. The stroke probably will leave him with a complete or partial disability."

C. U. and Maryland Scrimmage Again; Pete Sachon Stars

By Jack Munhall

Ambitious sophomores, refusing to step aside in favor of 1939 regulars, continued yesterday to make it difficult for coaches of the Big Four to select tentative line-ups for fast approaching opening games.

With less than two weeks remaining before they plunge into the campaign, the powers that be at Georgetown, Maryland, Catholic and George Washington are more confused than is usual at this time of a fall training season. But while the jumbled situation has its drawbacks, it also has its advantages, for the veterans are not being given a chance to rest on their reputations.

Sophs in Limelight

Sophomores completely dominated the show at College Park as Maryland played host to George Washington in the third scrimmage of the season between the two elevens. Don Shockey and Jack Gilmore, a pair of first-year Terrapin backs, represented practically all of Maryland's offensive strength, while Halfback Bill Mulvey and End Brendan Stynes, both rookies, were outstanding for the Cards. Tackle Luther Conrad was another conspicuous Terrapin sophomore.

This is not to say, however, that the veterans were a general washout. Far from it in several cases, particularly that of Pete Sachon, C. U.'s fine senior quarterback.

Sachon, who is fast developing his ball carrying ability to a point where he can be classed as a real triple-threat back, sparked the Cards to a 13-0 victory in the scrimmage which was played under actual game conditions.

Sachon Shows Way

Sachon paved the way for the first Cardinal touchdown soon after the scrimmage began. His 50-yard end sweep from punt formation was the highlight of a 70-yard sustained drive which was culminated in six points as Fullback Al Norris dove over from the 2-yard line.

Shortly after, Sachon intercepted a Maryland pass thrown by Halfback Joe Murphy. This gave the Cards possession of the ball at midfield. Four plays later they had scored the day's last points. The touchdown came spectacularly as Sachon, rushed hard, threw to Halfback Hank Brostek, who made a shoestring catch and then picked up a tandem of three blockers to score easily.

Minneapolis Wins

Kansas City, Sept. 17 (AP).—Minneapolis got a jump on the Blues by winning the first game of the play-offs, 5 to 2, tonight behind the steady pitching of Wally Tauscher, who received brilliant support, which included three double plays to nip as many Kansas City rallies.

Macks Upset Tribe, 4-3, As Yanks Blank Browns

Pitcher Beckman, Fielder Miles Co-Heroes As Tailend A's Knock Indians From Lead; Still Hopeful, New York Scores 9-0 Shutout

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 17.—The cellar-dwelling Athletics jerked the Cleveland Indians out of first place today with a 4-to-3 triumph representing Philadelphia's second straight one-run decision over the Tribe.

Pitcher Bill Beckman and Right Fielder DeeMiles were villains of the Connie Mack-authored play titled: "If the Indians Win the Pennant, They'll Have to Earn It."

Beckman was in more trouble than a Scotchman minus pockets, but scattered Cleveland's nine blows well enough to defeat big Al Milnar, who departed in the seventh as Bob Johnson singled to tally Beckman with the deciding run.

In the Indians' half, Roy Weatherly was on second, after doubling with two men out, and Lou Boudreau occupied first via the walk route when Miles uncorked the sensational catch which dropped the Indians into second place, a half game behind the victorious Detroit Tigers.

Hal Trosky had just waded into a three and one pitch for a deep drive to the cinder track in right center. Both Miles and Center Fielder Sam Chapman dashed to field the ball. It appeared neither had a chance, but Miles tore on and caught the drive at top speed to kill a two-run triple.

Although the Indians had nine hits, that was their last threat and the Athletics salvaged two games of the five-contest series.

Originally Mack was expected to start Phil Marchildon, rookie acquired from Toronto, but instead used the veteran Beckman because "I don't want anybody to think we're not trying to win." The aged scorecard waver said he also would pitch regulars against Detroit in the series opening tomorrow, and experiment with rookies when the Athletics get around to clubs out of the running.

Today's Cleveland Stadium shuffle was witnessed by 2,000 fans and 78,000 bare seats. The Indians open a three-game series against the Senators here tomorrow, but are expected to hold back Pitchers Bob

St. Louis, Sept. 17.—Still struggling to keep in the thick of the American League pennant fight, the New York Yankees overwhelmed the troublesome St. Louis Browns today 9 to 0.

Atley Donald kept six hits well scattered and was in trouble only twice. In the fifth he gave a double and single with one out, but a double play ended the threat. In the ninth a single and two walks loaded the bases, but Donald stifled the uprising with two of the six strikeouts he spotted through the game.

Some of the joy of breaking their three-game losing streak was lost to the Yankees because Joe DiMaggio, their kingpin, had a recurrence of his old leg injury in the second inning and had to leave the game. His trouble was described as a charley horse and not serious, but no one knew whether he would be able to play in tomorrow's important double-header with the Chicago White Sox.

He batted in three of the world champions' runs before leaving the game.

The Browns beat themselves by supplementing the Yanks' ten hits with four errors. Joe Gordon, first man up in the game, got on base when Don Heffner muffed his pop fly and two singles and DiMaggio's force gave New York two tallies.

In the second Frank Crosetti walked and Donald sent a roller to first. George McQuinn and Shortstop John Berardino made bad throws at each other and both were safe, Crosetti on third. He scored on a fly; then a single and a walk filled the bases for a single by DiMaggio.

Nats Bag a Tiger at Second

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Jimmy Bloodworth, Nats second baseman, greets Pete Fox, Detroit outfielder, at second with a putout after Fox attempted to steal on Catcher Jake Early yesterday in the first inning in Detroit. Early snapped the ball to Jimmy in plenty of time, but the Nats lost, 6-3.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Sept. 17.—We do not mean to compare the two characters, or even mention them in the same breath, but Satan himself could not have conceived a more diabolical revenge than may be brewing for Clark Griffith against the Cleveland Indians.

POVICH

You see, starting tomorrow, the Indians must meet Mr. Griffith's Nats in three games at Cleveland. Prof. Einstein, working a double shift, could not revive any mathematical possibilities for the Nats in the 1940 pennant race, so the games at Cleveland are vastly unimportant to the Nats. But they are as important as all get-out to the Indians who are scenting their first pennant in 20 years, and leading the league with only a dozen games to play.

Thus the Nats, their pennant hopes deader than a museum owl, remain a team to be reckoned with—at least by the Indians. Mr. Griffith's club is cast in a dog-in-the-manger role with the power, perhaps, to deny the pennant to Cleveland. Three victories for the Nats in the series, or perhaps even two, would doubtless jolt the Indians out of the World Series.

If Mr. Griffith were a bitter sort of man, which he is not, he could fiendishly remind General Manager Slapnicka, of the Indians, of certain disservices by the Cleveland club against the Nats this season.

If the Nats' owner were a vindictive man, which he is not, we could visualize him picking up the telephone in his little stucco office at Griffith Stadium and calling Mr. Slapnicka. It could go something like this:

Griffith: "Hello, Slap, this is Clark Griffith calling. Just thought I'd give you a ring. Those are three mighty important games you're playing with my club starting tomorrow."

Slapnicka: "That's right, Mr. Griffith, they're mighty important to us. We'd hate to lose any of 'em."

Griffith: "It ought to be a nice series. You folks would feel pretty bad if you missed out on the pennant now when you're in the lead."

Slapnicka: "Sure we would feel bad, Mr. Griffith. But is that what you called about?"

Griffith: "Well, not exactly. I was just thinking about all the times this season I asked you to pitch Bob Feller in my park so we could get a crowd out, and how you never would."

Slapnicka: "That was too bad, Mr. Griffith, I'm awfully sorry about that."

Griffith: "I was kinda sorry myself at the time. You folks were riding high and we weren't doing so well. Feller in the box would have given us one of those big Sunday crowds we really needed this year."

Slapnicka: "We'll try to make that up to you some time, Griff, but what's that got to do with tomorrow's doubleheader?"

Griffith: "Oh, nothing, I just thought maybe you didn't know we had Sid Hudson and Ken Chase ready to pitch against you in that doubleheader. They're a coupla pretty good pitchers, apt to beat anybody. I don't want you to think we're trying to make it tough for you, but it just happens that Hudson and Chase are ready to pitch."

Slapnicka: "Saving 'em for us, huh! Why didn't you pitch those two guys against the Tigers earlier in the week?

Griffith: "Don't get me wrong, Slap, we're not trying to make it tough for Cleveland. Incidentally, remember a few weeks ago when you knocked me out of $20,000 cash from the Tigers for Buddy Myer by claiming him at the $7,500 waiver price? I hated to lose that money."

Slapnicka: "Well, what's that got to do with these ball games we're playing your club."

Griffith: "Oh, nothing, I just thought maybe you'd be interested to hear about Dutch Leonard. Pretty good pitcher, that Leonard. Just beat the Tigers with six hits. He's gonna pitch the third game of our series with you."

Slapnicka: "Gulp."

The fact is, the Indians couldn't be much unluckier if a plot were, indeed, being hatched against them, which it is not. Washington's pitching ticket for the three games with the Indians will actually be Hudson-Chase-Leonard, and it bodes ill for Cleveland. They aren't the best pitchers in the league, but they are the three best pitchers to be found on any one club in the league and the fact that they are rested may be Cleveland's misfortune.

The Indians can scarcely squawk at the Nats' pitching program. Bucky Harris hasn't been withholding any of the trio from a regular turn to shoot at the Indians. Their regular turns simply will fall in Cleveland. The Nats didn't ease upon the Red Sox last Labor Day. They started Hudson and Chase and knocked Boston out of the race by winning a doubleheader. When the Nats entrained for the West, he announced that his club would use its regulars whenever they met the leading teams. "They'll have to beat the best we've got," said Griffith. In Cleveland's case, that is order—in triplicate.

Reds Near Flag With 2-1 Edge Over Phils

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 17.—Cincinnati moved to within one game of the National League pennant today by nosing out the Phillies, 2 to 1, in a mound duel between Whitey Moore and Kirby Higbe.

The Reds must win one more game while Brooklyn loses to clinch their second straight title. Brooklyn's 5-0 defeat by St. Louis today widened the gap between the first and second place teams to 11 games.

In addition to throttling the Phil attack, Moore also halted the consecutive game-hitting streak of Danny Litwhiler, rookie Phil outfielder, at 21 straight games, a season's record for the major leagues. Litwhiler fouled out on his first three trips to the plate and was thrown out at first by a hair after a spectacular stop of his grounder by Billy Myers in the ninth.

Myers' wild throw in an attempt to complete a double play enabled Ham Schulte to score the Phillies' run in the sixth inning.

Cincinnati tied the count in the eighth on Frank McCormick's double, Ripple's sacrifice and a squeeze sacrifice by Jimmy Wilson that permitted McCormick to score. The Reds won out in the ninth when Bill Werber tripled and scored on Goodman's double.

Kansas State Loses Fullback for Two Weeks

Manhattan, Kans., Sept. 17 (AP).—The Kansas State football team switched to running plays in a brisk practice today after limiting yesterday's drill almost entirely to passing.

Lyle Wilkins, junior fullback, will be on the sidelines about two weeks because of a shoulder injury received in a blocking drill.

Dodgers Lose 5-0 Decision To St. Louis

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 17.—The St. Louis Cardinals pushed the Brooklyn Dodgers to the brink of elimination from the National League pennant race today by scoring a 5 to 0 shutout on Max Lanier's five-hit hurling.

This put the second place Dodgers 11 games behind Cincinnati with 11 games left to play. All other clubs have been mathematically erased from the running.

Lanier never gave Brooklyn a chance, facing only 33 men and letting none get farther than second.

The Cards were held to seven hits and until the sixth were shut out by Lefty Lee Grissom. Then they got a run on singles by Terry Moore and Pepper Martin sandwiched around a wild pitch.

In the eighth the Red Birds scored four times after loading the bases on a single and two walks. Pepper beat out a hit to second and Pete Coscarart threw wild to let in three runs. The wild horse stole second and tallied on a single by Ernie Koy.

Congressional Country Club Sale Held Up by Maryland Court

2d Mortgage Holders Ask For Delay

Group Fearing Loss Of Equity to Offer Reorganization Plan; Hearing Set Oct. 24

The Federal District Court in Baltimore yesterday deferred sale of the foreclosed Congressional Country Club for 30 days in order to allow submission of a reorganization plan.

The decision was made by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut on behalf of a group of second mortgage bondholders who protested they would lose their equity under the terms of the foreclosure.

The club, located in nearby Montgomery County and built in 1924 at a cost of about $1,000,000, was sold at auction September 4 through foreclosure by the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., which held the first mortgage of $251,000, which with taxes and interest, ran up to $270,000.

Get Court Order

A bloc of approximately 100 club members, forming a new corporation, bid in for the property, and bought it for the $270,000. However, a group of second mortgage holders had meanwhile obtained a court order from Judge Chesnut which, while allowing the sale proceedings to go ahead, stipulated that the court could set aside the transaction following consideration of the case.

At yesterday's hearing the judge heard counsel for Acacia, the second mortgage bondholders, life and active members of the club, and for the club itself. The attorneys were instructed to name candidates so that the judge could select a trustee to operate the club for the 30-day trial period.

Hearing Oct. 24

A hearing on the reorganization proposal will be held at the court October 24.

Equity of the second mortgage holders amounts to about $143,000. E. F. and D. C. Colladay, counsel for the petitioning group of second mortgage holders, contended that foreclosure would wipe out their investment. Attorneys for Acacia, the first mortgage holders; Roger J. Whiteford and John J. Wilson, argued that a large number of second mortgage holders preferred foreclosure under an agreement by Acacia to release 80 of the club's 390 acres to them.

Acacia Insurance Co., Whiteford said, had offered to put up $300,000 for a first mortgage on the new company, if the club owners would put up $50,000 for repairs and improvements, including another nine-hole golf course.

Congressional Country Club was organized in 1924, with Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, as its first president. Woodrow Wilson and Calvin Coolidge were among its early members. The club today has a membership of about 600.

N. C. A. A. Asks Colleges Stress Preparedness

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 17.—The Nation's universities and colleges have been urged by the National Collegiate Athletic Association and athletic directors of the Western Conference to extxend and intensify their athletic programs as a means of integrating them with the national preparedness program.

Reporting on its recent meetings with Western Conference authorities, the N. C. A. A. said both the War and Navy Departments had expressed appreciation for the association's offers of assistance in preparing men for national defense.

The N. C. A. A.'s executive committee said: "The value of athletic training was clearly established during the last war and is recognized by military and naval authorities not only for its effect on physical condition but also because competitive athletics develops a combative spirit, a respect for cooperative effort between team mates, responsiveness to leadership and other characteristics common to the athlete and to the efficient fighting man.

"That portion of this Nation's youth who have been trained in the schools and colleges to engage in physical contact sports is exempt from the suspicion of having 'gone soft.' They will not be found among members of the Fifth Column."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

The giant cogwheels of the Democratic Party stopped long enough here Monday to save a prize fight for the District and $2,500 for Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong. The White House, nerve center of a war-twisted world, took time out to smooth out the obstacles confronting a fist fight between Armstrong and the local pride, Phil Furr, and Ed Flynn stopped electing Roosevelt for a moment to do his bit to save the 25 per cent.

CONSIDINE

There is a faint chance that you may not follow this. Here's the solution:

When the New York State Athletic Commission okayed a fight between Armstrong and the lightweight champ, Lew Jenkins, it did so with the proviso that Armstrong defend his welterweight championship in New York in his next fight. Mead's word is his bond, of course, but the realistic sock solons made him put up $2,500 forfeit money, to boot.

Mead promptly signed Armstrong to tackle Furr here in the city's big annual show sponsored by the Variety Club, a theatrical group which does a lot of fine work around the country. The New York boxing board had overlooked a number of Armstrong's fights around the country, and refused to recognize them as title affairs, though the cities themselves sometimes did, so Mead thought that that would be the case in the Furr match. However, he was tipped off that Gen. Phelan was sore at his making the match—inasmuch as Armstrong is scheduled to fight Fritzi Zivic in Madison Square Garden for Mike Jacobs October 4.

So Mead hurried down here and asked the local promoters to cut the number of rounds of the Armstrong-Furr fight down from the scheduled 15 to 14 or 12. The sponsors, Carter Barron, the movie executive and former Georgia Tech grid star, and Bill McCormick, the retired boxing writer who drifted naturally into an important post with the American Wildlife Institute, were agreeable. And for a time it looked as if the thing would be scheduled for 12 rounds, which would have made it a title fight here but not so far as New York was concerned—thus saving Mead his $2,500 and a probable suspension.

But the D. C. Boxing Commission put its heavy foot down, albeit nervously. It met in secret session and at the end of the meeting the former chairman, Chief of Police Brown, hurried out the back door of the board room and the other two commissioners gave Mead and the promoters a hurried kiss-off and escaped by the front door, leaving Lieut. Col. Heinie Miller, the N. B. A. head, with the job of telling Mead it had to be 15 rounds.

Mead began to think of some way to break the news to Mrs. Gloria Youngblood Mead that they had $2,500 less to spend for dinner some night at Toots Shor's. Then with, a view to calling off Gen. J. J. Phelan's certain choler he dispatched a quick wire, saying, "Cancellation of this fight will cause sponsors to sue Armstrong and me for expenses and profits of show. I have no other alternative than to go through with match and I stand ready to fill contract with Mike Jacobs in Garden on October 4 with Zivic. I hope you will try to see my position in this thing. This is a charity show and next to impossible to walk out on it."

Barron, a live wire, had a better idea. He called Steve Early, the President's right-hand man at the White House, and Early called Flynn in New York. Flynn was to call Phelan and try to get the General to listen to reason—which we hope he will. Mead began to breath a little easier, but was still popping sweat a few hours later when he told us, "Leave it to me to get in the switches. New York or Washington . . . I'm always in the middle."

This Furr is a good sound battler with an excellent right-hand punch that may annoy the amazing little colored man for a time. He was figured to be about through down here, but he belted out Steve Mamakos, who had been kicking a lot of other welters around. He has a good local following and the fight is expected to do $30,000. It is the first title fight here that doesn't involve featherweights, and the District's first and perhaps last chance to see one of the most amazing fighters in history. Armstrong held three titles simultaneously, and, to all intents and purposes, won a fourth when he slapped Ceferino Garcia all over the ring in Los Angeles this year, at a time when Garcia was world's middleweight champion of New York and California. It was called a draw, as insiders knew it would be the day it was signed.

With Mead puffing around the village, and the Brooklyn Football Dodgers just leaving (after showing that they might still win the Eastern division championship this year) Washington took on a further whiff of the subway when roly-poly Harry Mendel appeared with Torchy Peden to begin promoting the city's first six-day bike race. Mendel brought with him some sorely depressing news. Tony Galento will soon embark on a comeback.

Gonzaga Coach, Pessimistic As Usual, Sees Fair Season

By Bill Burnett

After two weeks of practice, Coach Orrel Mitchell is still very much in the dark as to what sort of a Gonzaga High football team he'll turn out this year. It might be good, he says, and it might be mediocre. Certainly it won't be the worst in Purple history.

Reason for that is a trio of high-stepping backs, the cream of last year's starting backfield. These, along with a first-line guard and a veteran end, form as fine a nucleus for a grid team as any high school in town can boast.

The backs are Mitchell's special charge. The dapper little mentor, deciding it was too much of a job for one man, turned line coaching over to "Horse" Holbrook, former St. John's coach, at the start of this season. Between the two a grid machine is being built at Gonzaga field, but neither can say whether it will hit on 11 cylinders or considerably less. Drills to date have been confined mostly to fundamentals, plus "conditioning."

"We'll be able to make predictions early next week after a few scrimmages," Mitchell confided yesterday. "That is when our replacements will really be tested. So far, however, I'd prophesy a fair season for Gonzaga, despite the terrific schedule we've arranged."

Pride and joy of Mitchell, a former ball carrier himself, are Backs Boby Mulvihill, Elmer Raba and Bernie Healy. Mulvihill is probably the smartest of the lot, though the youngest. He'll call signals from the fullback position, do much of the climax running and share the passing chore with Raba. The latter is being taught to hurl on the run and just plain run, which he did well enough in his first year in 1939. Healy looked good last season, but saw little action due to an injury.

Finding one or several good blocking backs is Mitchell's big problem. These will be selected from among Harold Hartman, brother of a former Purple ace; Charles Baudoin and Eddie Lauch, reserves of last year; "Reds" Murphy, up from the frosh eleven, and Charley O'Connor, a transferee.

Bob O'Donnell, brother of All-District Tackle Lane, is one end certain of landing a spot on Holbrook's line, and Francis Reilly appears set at one guard. Both earned letters last year. Competition for the other wing job will probably wind up between Francis Mullen, a reformed guard, and Eddie Simms. Either Louis Ott or John Fahey, both holdover reserves, should take the other guard position.

For center, Holbrook has Francis Vincent and Johnny Grigg ready to take over. And his tackles most likely will be John Mullaney and Phil Koontz, both boasting some experience.

Central will be the first foe for the Purple Saturday, September 28. After that, almost every good team in the District and vicinity will be met, with the crucial clash being St. John's on November 1.

Navy Eleven Trips Rutgers In Scrimmage

Fine Showing Made By Middies Despite Newness of Season

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 17.—Football squads of the Naval Academy and Rutgers University of New Jersey, scrimmaged for 2 hours on the Navy practice field this afternoon and the Tars had all the better of it. The New Jersey lads arrived here yesterday for three days of practice.

The practice was not held under regular game conditions. There was only one kickoff, the teams alternating in placing the ball in play on the 20-yard line. No official record was kept of the score, but the Middies rang up six or seven touchdowns to one for the Scarlet-clad lads.

Made Good Showing

The Middies made an impressive showing for early season, as they have been at work only ten days. They displayed greater drive and their aerial attack also went off with success. The visitors generally hurried in getting off their plays by the fast charging Navy forwards. However, they managed to pull several forward passes.

The Tars scored three of their touchdowns on passes and the others on drives off tackle or sweeps around the flanks. Rutgers lone score came when it launched a pass and the ball after it bobbled off the fingertips of several opposing players, finally falling into the arms of Gilbert, who scampered 70 yards to the goal line.

Teams Alternated

Practically all members of both squads had a chance during the scrimmage. The Middies opened up with a third and fourth-string combination. Then Navy's big team took the field, and after working over half an hour, gave way to the second eleven. Harvey Harmon, Rutgers head coach, had no fixed line-up. He, too, started a combination of understudies and gradually worked the more experienced players in one and two at a time.

The day's workout saw the first important changes among the Navy regulars, but whether they will be permanent is problematic. Bill Busik, outstanding star of last year's plebe team, was moved into a halfback berth in place of big Cliff Lenz, and Johnny Harrell, another former plebe, supplanted Ralph Boyer at quarterback. Busik is a potential triple threat in big company. He is an adept passer, fine punter and splendid outside runner. Harrell, who came to Annapolis from Oklahoma A. and M., is the national collegiate heavyweight wrestling champion. He played very little football before entering the Academy, but has developed fast after his first experience with the plebes last year.

Orioles Beaten In 1st I. L. Play-off Game by Wings

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 17.—The Rochester Red Wings, 1940 International League pennant winners, defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 2-0, in the first game of their four-out-of-seven playoff series tonight. Herschel Lyons was touched for seven hits, three more than Floyd Stromme allowed the Red Wings, but errorless fielding by his mates helped his cause. The Orioles who finished in fourth place in the final standings, committed two errors.

Films of 'Skin-Dodger Game Show Faults

Flaherty Thinks Club Should Have Won by Larger Score; Blocking Almost Nil in Final Sessions

The Redskins-Brooklyn Dodgers opening game was played all over again last night—restaged in the basement of the Fairfax Hotel, and the score was 45 to 0, Redskins.

That's the way Coach Ray Flaherty doped it out as pictures of the Redskins' 24-17 victory Sunday were run off in slow motion before the assembled squad of 33.

In his final look back before buckling down to work for next Sunday's date with the New York Giants Flaherty pointed out how the Redskins should have had at least three more touchdowns if they had been playing heads-up ball—which the films showed they were not doing in the second half.

But for a few brief spots in the second half, the Redskins virtually abandoned downfield blocking, the tackling was ragged and the downfield work under punts was lackadaisical.

On the other hand, the Dodgers were just swinging out with renewed vigor after holding the Redskins on the 1-yard line by throwing nine men into the forward wall.

Three plays Flaherty insisted should have been scoring thrusts included that goal-line fizzle, Wilbur Moore's 13-yard jaunt on a reverse late in the game and deep in Dodger territory and Dick Todd's 41-yard jaunt up the sidelines. The Redskin coach insisted that but for sluggish downfield blocking these last two jaunts would have carried all the way, backing up his statements by having the motion pictures of the particular plays run over and over.

The motion pictures convinced Flaherty of one point—that the Dodgers will be a much more formidable opponent when the Redskins go to Brooklyn November 10.

The Giants use the five-man line on defense the greater part of the time, and Flaherty this week is laying special emphasis on his attack in anticipation of the Giants' defensive methods. The Redskin coach said that Brooklyn's use of this defense came as a surprise.

Fair Grounds To Become Just a Memory

Deadline for filing an application to conduct the usual winter race meeting passed last midnight and the mails came without any word from the Louisiana Jockey Club, owner of the track.

There was no indication even that an application had been mailed and Robert G. Eddy, jr., general manager of the club, said merely "there is a for sale sign at the Fair Grounds."

The new racing commission, created by the "reform Legislature, said any application postmarked before Monday midnight would be accepted by the commission at its meeting Thursday.

Real estate circles reported a syndicate had made a satisfactory offer to buy the property and convert it into a residential project.

Under legislative act the commission would have had complete supervision over the mutuels at the track where the morning line, an ancient stand-by operated by the track, would have been prohibited. Private bookmaking, however, would have been permitted.

Racing in New Orleans had been almost continuous since 1837 except for a seven-year period, beginning in 1908, when it was abolished by State law.

The track, started in 1915, saw its brightest days under the ownership of E. R. Bradley, who sold out in 1932. He offered $50,000 handicaps.

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 17.—Dizzy Dean made it clear today that he is not thrilled over being recalled by the Chicago Cubs. He likes Tulsa and he thinks the National League is a joke.

Mrs. Patricia Dean concurred in virtually everything Hubby Diz had to say about everything in general, when they arrived here with the Cubs after a sojourn with the Tulsa Oilers of the Texas League, for whom Diz won nine and lost nine.

So far he has won two comeback games for the Cubs, but—

"The National League is a joke now," Diz said. "The first six teams in the American League could win the pennant in this league by 20 games.

Mrs. Dean then stepped in with a fast one down the middle:

"And here's Bucky Walters, of the Reds, as the first pitcher to win 20 games in the league this season," she said. "In the old days six or eight pitchers would win 20 or 30 games each year."

"My arm is as good as ever and I ought to win a lot of games."

Weatherite Wins Longmeadows Purse at Havre de Grace

Pays $21.60 After Foul Is Disallowed

Two-Year-Old Beats Favored Crepe Myrtle By Length; Winabeau, Pont Neuf in Double

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 17.—Weatherite, a 2-year-old daughter of Prince of Wales and Port Weather, has been knocking around Eastern tracks most of the year trying to find a field she could whip. The filly, owned by Mrs. G. O. Russell, finally made the grade today but she had to wait until after the stewards heard a foul claim lodged against her in the running of the Longmeadows Purse, the day's feature event.

Weatherite finished a length in advance of the favored Crepe Myrtle with Stolen Tryst third. Jockey R. Howell, who had been suspended for rough riding in the first race, made the objection. After going to the front, he claimed Jockey I. Hanford took Weatherite across in front of him too sharply. Howell was seen to pull up abruptly. The stewards listened longer than they deliberated for the "official" light soon was touched and the $21.10 pay-off on Weatherite began.

Despite the fact that weather conditions were the best, only 7,500 customers reported for the sport which was thrilling for the most part. The track was lightning fast and Weatherite was clocked in 1:06 2-5 for the 5½ furlongs of the feature.

E. J. Reed's Winabeau, an aptly-named daughter of Sun Beau and Dark Edwina, gave the longshot players a chance to shout by scoring a nose victory over B. F. Christmas' Wake. Etruscan was third. Wake set the pace but could not resist the closing rush of the $28.60 shot.

Those who coupled Winabeau with Pont Neuf, the $4.50 favorite in the second race, cashed a $78.30 daily double. Pont Neuf came from behind and then held sway in front of a closing rush staged by Nilon. Kaptime was third.

My Junior, with Jockey Manny Berg up, scored a mild surprise in the third race, winning at $14.50. Nick and Ceiling Zero followed the winner to the imaginary wire.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

The need for some new system of assigning weights for big stake races, something I have long advocated, is brought out once more with the announcement that Challedon has been given only 120 pounds for the $50,000 added Narragansett Special. I would like to see Challedon get in lighter, myself, but what about the owners and trainers of other horses? Art Brown has made friends with my Dalmatian dog, Charles Town. We were sitting around the other night and the dog, who is stone deaf, snuggled up beside the WOL windbag. "No wonder that dog likes you," I said. "He's deaf and he doesn't have to hear your program." Art came back with, "Yes, and he doesn't read these lousy selections of yours, either." Lucky dog, eh? Scarlet O was the first claim of the meeting, going to F. Brown (no relation to Art) for $1,000. Burning Star leaves tomorrow for Narragansett to go in the Special. He went to the stud and came back. When a worst post actor than Autumnquest comes along, please let me know. Jockey R. McDonald was thrown four times and got a big hand when he refused to allow the mare to keep him down. Jockey R. Howell, who claimed a foul against Weatherite yesterday, was suspended for rough riding. The stewards spotted him while he was riding Winabeau, the $28.60 winner. It was learned today that Little Beans was slightly cut down in last Saturday's Eastern Shore Handicap. The conqueror of Level Best has been named for the Junior Championship Stakes in New York this Saturday but is a doubtful starter. Alan Clarke, the breeder, and Joe Judge, former Nats first baseman, came up together. Clarke was a pro pitcher for eight years. They stopped by Pimlico on the way up to watch Mowlee, Clarke's colt, breeze for the first time. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Hotzea, scratched from yesterday's race for this event, displayed good speed while finishing behind Little Beans in New England in his only start. Kennet raced well in his last New York race and may be improving. Punch Drunk appears capable of handling the others.

Second race—Sun Triad was no match for the fleet Cis Marion on Monday but is more cheaply placed in today's encounter. He rates a slight shade over Patrol Flight which impressed favorably when a romping winner in a maiden event opening date. Battle Won is in form and dangerous.

Third race—Gay Balko failed to match strides with such as Bill Farnsworth and Early Morn opening day but held on well to put up a game performance. Slow Motion has class but late form has been poor. Cherry Trifle is a money possibility.

Fourth race—Guerrilla and Roncat appear is the principal contenders in this heat with Guerrilla favored on the merits of his victories over the latter in New England. Roncat is improving steadily and today might be his day. Port Wales has speed but has been quitting.

Fifth race—Jelwell, racing wide in his last race, staged a game finish to earn fifth place behind Jay Jay and Clyde Tolson. Meeting cheaper contention here, he receives the call. Microphone won recently in New York but picking up 120 pounds figures second best. Old Joe might be close.

Sixth race—Bell Chimes won her last Timonium outing against the better grade thoroughbreds at that point after showing good form in New York. She is well placed in this heat. Chief contention figures to come from Bud's King after the latter's easy win last week at Timonium. Aster Princess is not out of it.

Seventh race—Wildmute was third to Flaming High last out at Saratoga and provided he runs back to that effort, he should have little difficulty trouncing this field. High Lance can better his last race and will be the one to beat. Panorama, usually consistent, rates best of the others.

Best bet—Jelwell.

Gipe, Bones, Rochelle and Balestri Tie

Bulk of Starters Go Off at Manor Today; Peacock to Be Favored Over Field

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A quartet of early qualifiers in the District Amateur Championship tied with 77s yesterday at Manor Country Club and left medal honors wide open for the majority of the field that will play 18-hole medal tests today.

Southpaw Tommy Bones, of the host club, and a Beaver Dam trio, Jim Gipe, Joe Balestri and Billy Rochelle all hit the 77 figure and indicated that a score of 77 will probably playoff for the championship flight late this afternoon.

Bones made his the hard way. Six over par for six holes, including five straight fives. Bones started his streak with a 30-foot deuce putt on the eighth for a birdie and he barely missed another birdie on the ninth. He holed a 60-yard approach shot on the twelfth for a birdie, dropped an eight-foot putt for a par on the thirteenth and holed another approach shot on the fourteenth for another birdie. He used only 10 putts on the back nine.

Gipe Started Well

Gipe, the Federal and Hot Spring Invitation champ, who was bumped out of the Beaver Dam Club title play in the first round last week, started with two fine birdie threes and was out in 36. He staggered around the back nine in 41, however, for his 77.

Rochelle needed par for a 73 with four holes to play but he ran into a pair of sixes and a bogey five on the last four holes and finished with a 77. Balestri scored his 77 the most consistently with 39-38. Chick Heimer, of the host club, was next best of the 15 players with an 82.

Volney G. Burnett, the Chevy Chase Invitation titlist, was forced to withdraw from the event and thus robbed the field of a potential champion. Bobby Brownell, who will leave for Duke today, is the only other top-flight amateur of the season missing in the tournament.

Peacock Favored

Although he hasn't won a tournament since the spring of 1939, Roger Peacock is considered the favorite in the championship, but the youth delegation, including Defending Champion Ralph Bogart, Earle Skinker, Buddy Sharkey and Billy Shea, must be considered. Maryland State Champion M. Parker Nolan is also a threat.

Someone in the field is expected to equal or better par for medal honors, also won last year by Bogart, while scores of 77 or better will probably be necessary for the first flight. If today is suitable for low scoring, yesterday's 77s may be on the outside looking in.

Two rounds of match play are scheduled Thursday, with a dinner for the contestants at night. The semifinals and finals will be played Friday morning and afternoon.

Philadelphia Sending Strong Team Here for Intercity Match

District to Be Weakened By Absence of Four Lowest Handicapped Women Golf Players

Word from Philadelphia that the Quaker City linkswomen are sending their strongest team here Friday for the annual intercity match was hardly encouraging to the District's top-notch women golfers whose line-up finds four of the lowest handicapped players missing.

Mrs. Myron Davy, enroute to the National Women's Championship in California; Mrs. Betty Meckley, out of competitive golf for some time due to an operation; Mrs. Bishop Hill, who will be out of town; and Marion Brown, whose position will keep her busy, will not play for the local team that will be trying to regain lost prestige suffered in last year's rout.

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the Middle Atlantic and Maryland State champion and assistant intercity team captain, will play in the first bracket with former City Champion Mrs. Leo Walper as a partner.

Mrs. Pray Plays

The second duo will be Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, and Louise Claytor, Chevy Chase, while newly crowned Kenwood titlist, Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg and Mrs. Karl S. Giles will fill the third spot.

Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Thomas Brendon, a seven handicapped played from Washington Golf and Country Club and a newcomer to District golf circles, will play in the next twosome. D. C. Women's Champion Elizabeth Houghton, Chevy Chase, and Congressional's new champion, Mrs. J. W. Godfrey, will add strength to the local line-up in the fifth spot, while the other duo will be composed of Mrs. George Stratemeyer, Columbia, and Mrs. Harvey Cooper, Kenwood. Mrs. Howard Simons, Manor, will be the first alternate.

The Philadelphia players, probably led by the many-time national champion, Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, will arrive tomorrow and will play a practice round at Columbia Country Club, scene of the matches. They will be guests at a dinner given by the District Women's Golf Association at the club tomorrow night.

Friday's schedule of play is singles matches in the morning and mixed Scotch foursomes in the afternoon, all at Columbia.

Post Cup Entries
Close Friday at 1 p. m.

Friday, at 1 p. m., is the entry closing deadline for The Washington Post Cup Women's Golf championship, which will be played in two classes over as many courses Tuesday, September 24. The Post will give net and gross prizes in Class A for the 18 and under handicapped players, and Class B for the 19 to 36, inclusive, handicapped linkswomen.

The 18-hole "A" play is scheduled over the Woodmont course, while the "B" play will be at Kenwood. Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, of Chevy Chase, won The Post Cup last year, when the event was all one class.

Brownell Tops 'Gold Putter' Field of 157

73 Captures Prize In Kenwood Meet; Mrs. Walper Scores

Bobby Brownell won the "Golden Putter" in Gordon Hittenmark's Radio Open tournament yesterday at Kenwood Country Club with a two over par round of 73, best of 157 contestants.

The Manor Club player bested two other young amateurs, Ralph Bogart and Earle Skinker, by a single stroke as they tied for second with gross 74s. Bob Peebles, Jock Olmstead and J. M. Palmer had 75 and John Jankowski 76.

E. V. Dove won low net with a 77-15, 62, over S. S. Blick and Fred Bach, with net 63s.

Mrs. Leo Walper's 84 topped the women's field by two strokes, with Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg second with an 86. Mrs. C. T. Vaile was third with 88 and Mrs. J. T. Powell fourth, 91.

Lois Gladding and Betty Burton tied for women's low net with 72s, winning over Mrs. H. W. Bashore's 73 and a 77 by Mrs. Robert Keebler.

Ralph Bogart, who begins defense of his city amateur title today, also won the N. B. C. trophy for the shot closest to the pin on the par three eighth hole, planting one 10 feet 8 inches from the pin.

Bob Masterson won a pair of golf shoes over a foursome of his Redskin buddies.

By International News Service

After the Giants tied it up in their half of the eighth, the Cubs put over the winning run in the ninth on two hits and an error.

Bees Swamp Four Pitchers, Beat Bucs, 10-5

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 17.—The Boston Bees halted the Pittsburgh surge today by belting four Pirate pitchers for 14 hits and a 10-5 victory.

The Bees teed off on starter Dick Lanahan and chased him before he could get a man out in the first inning, which ended with the Bees leading 4-0. They registered their fifth tally against Danny MacFayden in the fifth and cut loose with a five-run barrage against Mace Brown in the eighth.

Pitte Claims Run-Around On Salary

Departs AfterPromise Of $25 for His Drills Is Not Forthcoming, Lightweight Says

With the expected flareback from the New York Athletic Commission failing to materialize yesterday, the Phil Furr-Henry Armstrong welterweight championship fight continued at its never-a-dull-moment pace yesterday as dissension hit the camp of Furr.

Marcus Pitte, Puerto Rican sparmate of the 29-year-old former soldier, quit Furr's camp, complaining that he had been given the "run-around" when it came to be paid off for his work.

"I boxed five days with Furr last week and I was supposed to get $25 for it," Pitte declared. "I haven't seen anything of it yet and I'm not going up there to get punched around just for my health."

Furr, who worked six rounds yesterday with Billy Bullock, didn't choose to recognize Pitte's complaints. Pitte, a lightweight preliminary fighter of sorts, was a valuable member of Furr's sparring clique, however, because of his whirlwind style of punching a la Armstrong, who, incidentally, gave four sparring partners a ferocious beating yesterday.

Reaction Awaited

While Hammering Hank's trainer-brother, Harry, awaited word from Manager Eddie Mead, as to New York's reaction to the decision to go through with the 15-round title bout in Griffith Stadium September 23, Henry boxed seven rounds at Turner's Arena.

Armstrong battered Oscar Wright, local colored lightweight, for one round and then took on Billy Banks, chocolate-colored featherweight, whose fighting style somewhat resembles Furr's.

Hank's Timing Off

The champion's inaccurate punching was the only flaw his brother could find, but he pointed out that "Henry never was a good gymnasium fighter." Armstrong's final two rounds of work consisted of chasing around a frightened colored boy whom he had unintentionally knocked out in Monday's session at the arena, Billy Washington. Armstrong was working on his left hook, a heel-rocking punch, and his overhand right, a blow which carries dynamite and may spell the end of Furr in the early moments of next week's battle.

Armstrong, however, took a lot of punching around from Banks and Brookman, and several times Banks' flicking right, an innocuous slap compared with Furr's right, landed on Armstrong's protected cheek and ear.

The Variety Club, cheered by New York's apparent abandonment of plans to suspend Mead if he allowed Armstrong to defend the title against Furr, ordered an additional 750 ringside tickets and announced that more than 500 already have been sold.

Angel Besieged By Challenges To Mat Match

Tillett Appears Here Tomorrow, Facing Rudy Dusek

The Angel, the original Angel, otherwise known as Maurice Tillett, has been on the receiving end of a number of challenges directed at him by some of the wrestlers on tomorrow night's card at Turner's Arena, where he will meet Rough Rudy Dusek in the feature bout.

Promoter Joe Turner revealed that Ed Don George and Danno O'Mahoney, two erstwhile champions, are anxious to meet the Angel, should he win. Also after his scalp are Lou Plummer, his two-man pal, Eddie Newman.

Turner wants The Angel back for a return engegement, if he is successful in thrashing the Old Master, Rudy. The freakish grappler's manager, Carl Pojello, says The Angel's schedule is heavy, and hopes he can arrange it so the Frenchman can wrestle here again shortly.

Promoter Turner states that his advance sale indicates another capacity outpouring, and is making arrangements to accomodate 2,000 fans.

There was a report out yesterday that The Angel may be forced to curtail his American engagement, due to the fact that his time limit has expired. But The Angel probably will dread the thought of returning to his native country now dominated by Nazis, and he may run into an unwelcome situation, it was said.

In a bang-up supporting card Don George faces Herbie Freeman; O'Mahoney takes on Plummer; Babe Zaharias tackles Tom Mahoney and Abe Yourist opposes Newman.

U. S. Coast Guard Wins Rifle Match

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 17 (AP).—The U. S. Coast Guard gave the Cavalry, Marines and Infantry a shooting lesson with the service rifle today at the national matches, defeating 72 other eight-man squads in a problem on surprise targets at ranges from 200 to 600 yards.

The Coast Guard crew scored 580 points to take the laurels, Ohio's National Guard finishing second with 539. Next came the Cavalry with 535, Oregon National Guard with 533, and the Missouri civilians with 527.

In the match, a squad of eight men, deployed as skirmishers and armed with seven Springfield service rifles and one automatic, fired on eight targets which rose at unannounced times while the squad walked slowly down the range. The match resembled actual combat work more than any other event on the two-week national match program.

Simmons, Pilot Of My Sin, Here Monday

1939 Gold Cup Winner Scheduled to Arrive For Regatta Training

"Zamie" Simmons, 1939 Gold Cup winner and pilot of My Sin, regarded as one of the speediest power boats of the day, will arrive in Washington next Monday to prepare for the President's Cup Regatta, scheduled September 27, 28 and 29, over the Potomac course, A. Aubrey Bogley, race chairman, announced last night.

Bogley said Simmons had requested five days of trial spins for the big race, and that arrangements had been completed late yesterday afternoon for the Nash Marine Supply Co., on Maine avenue, to take care of the giant craft, My Sin.

My Sin will be brought here in a specially built truck, Bogley said. Every part of the boat will fit perfectly into the truck so that serious damage might not result either during the course of the trip from Long Island or during its removal. Nash Marine experts will arrange for the boat to be lifted into the Washington Channel with a huge crane and also will supply an electric elevator for taking it in and out of the water during the daily trial spins.

Simmons won the 1939 Gold Cup at Detroit with a new competitive record of 66.240. Last month at Northport in defense of his crown, My Sin and Herb Mendelson's Notre Dame were leading by several laps in the first heat when My Sin threw a propeller blade. "Tough luck," as he described it, forced Simmons out of the President's Cup race in last year's first heat.

The fact that Simmons wants to come here almost a week in advance with his mechanic to groom his speed boat indicates the seriousness with which he is pointing for the President's Cup race, Bogley stated.

Simmons claims he has had My Sin to a speed of 115 miles per hour.

Sophomores Star In Grid Workouts

touchdown, claiming that it was an illegally screened pass. There seemed strong grounds for the complaint, for one C. U. tackle was several yards down field before Sachon passed.

Threatened at End

The Terrapins' closest approach to a score during the 1½-hour tussle came just before the teams quit. With Shockey and Gilmore carrying the ball on every play, Maryland marched 50 yards to the C. U. 10, where the opposition stiffened and the Terps lost the ball on downs.

Coaches of both teams were not greatly pleased with their showings defensively. Maryland, in particular, appeared to have far to go before it will have a fairly tight defense. The kicking of Sachon of C. U. and Joe Murphy of Maryland was excellent.

Meantime came word from Georetown and George Washington that pactically every position on both teams is wide open because of the surge of sophomores. After yesterday's scrimmaging at the Hilltop only four players are reasonably certain of starting against Roanoke Saturday night, September 28.

Lascari Pushed

John Lascari, who saw considerable action at end last season, is scrapping with Art Lemke, a vastly improved junior, for the other flank job. Should either of them slip, Bill Wixted and Al Lujack, a pair of veterans, and Sophomores Chris Pavich, Dave Wiley and Ken Engels are ready to step into the battle.

The battle for backfield assignments also is torrid, since no less than 15 backs are available. Coach Hagerty's present plans call for alternating backfields. One quartet probably will consist of last year's regulars, Quarterback Joe McFadden, Halfbacks Jules Koshlap and Lou Ghecas and Fullback Jim Castiglia. Contesting for positions in the other foursome will be veterans Al Falcone, Benny Bulvin, Jack Spencer and Ken McNichol, and Sophomores Bill McLaughlin, Jack Doolan, Frank Dornfeld, Al Kull, John Buckley and Walter O'Connell.

G. W. Coach Bill Reinhart issued a general warning to all lettermen to show more life lest they lose ground to the Colonials' strong sophomore talent. Reinhart mentioned no specific players, but hinted a shakeup might be imminent.

Reinhart also announced that he is contemplating still another player shift. Harry Ledford, sophomore blocking back, was tried at end yesterday and will be kept there if he shows any promise.

Defense Board Opposes U. S. Oil Trust Suit

Would Peril Arms Program, Report Informs Jackson

By Lewis Wood
Copyright by New York Times

The National Defense Advisory Commission has informed Attorney General Jackson that the anti-trust suit proposed by Assistant Attorney General Arnold to split apart the diversified activities of 22 major oil companies, with nearly 300 subsidiaries, would endanger the national defense program, it was reported in Administration circles yesterday.

Details of the commission's report to the Attorney General were lacking because it was sent to him in Alabama, where he attended the funeral of Speaker Bankhead. Arnold, in charge of the antitrust program, is said not to have seen the document.

From what can be learned, the commission said that sudden divorcement of the various interests of the oil companies would damage the defense program. Yet while taking this attitude as a matter of national policy, it was reported that the commission did not actually oppose filing the case, which has been in preparation for a year.

Up to Jackson

In other words, according to information here, the decision as to the suit rests with Jackson and possibly with President Roosevelt.

The first notice of the projected suit appeared late in July, and almost immediately the commission protested that an investigation of the defense question was advisable. On July 30, Jackson and the commission issued a joint statement that the defense body was making a detailed study. The report handed to the Attorney General is the result of that survey.

"Disintegration" of the large oil companies, it was said then, was sought by Arnold so that transportation and marketing could be separated from production. Specifically he wanted the companies to divorce themselves from control of pipelines and to change their marketing systems to enable independents to compete.

Seeks Price Equalization

Further, he wished to force down the difference between the prices of high-grade and ordinary gasoline to the automobile user at the pump, a difference which some of his experts say has brought the large oil companies many millions of dollars.

Working on the case for a year, his antitrust staff had the suit in readiness for filing within a few days when the Defense Commission interposed.

Fifty House members and 27 Senators have signed a petition indorsing the suit, while bills to divorce production, transportation and distribution of petroleum have been introduced. In addition, Representative John M. Coffee, Washington, has introduced a resolution to investigate the department over the suit and indicates that he will press this strongly if the papers are not filed before Congress adjourns or recesses.

Defense Commission members refused to discuss the report, saying only that it had been sent to the Attorney General.

The Unafraid

London's Firemen Forget Danger

By William McGaffin,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 17.—If there is one way to become oblivious to the dangers of the Battle of London it is to spend an evening with the fire brigade.

I know, for I've just been to a huge fire in central London that was blazing like Dante's inferno when we arrived. In two hours that tremendous fire, set by incendiary bombs, was under control.

Speeding through blacked-out streets, while German bombers droned overhead and antiaircraft guns raised harassing drumfire of exploding steel, I asked my guide if the firemen were afraid to fight fires in such conditions.

"They get to battling a blaze like this and that's all they think about. They forget about the danger overhead," he replied.

"Thirty pumps is a small fire, 60 is medium and a hundred and over is a major," my guide yelled.

It was in this District that several firemen were blown off a high ladder by a bomb and killed last night.

Up there in the cloud of sparks a fireman on a water tower trained a hose on adjoining roofs.

The guide explained that one of the biggest jobs is to prevent fires from spreading. He regretted that London had so many wooden roofs but he was "thankful we don't have any skyscrapers like yours in New York."

4 Plead Guilty To Housebreaking In Montgomery

Four men pleaded guilty yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville at trials on information of State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson.

Charles J. Keller, 21, was sentenced to serve six months in the House of Correction for housebreaking involving robbery of $32.50 from the Forest Glen Ice Cream Mart. Henry H. Walker, colored, 52, was sentenced to six months for housebreaking. Leroy Palmer, colored, charged with larceny of an automobile belonging to the Rockmont Motor Co., received a sentence of six months.

Harry Lee Talley, 19, was given a suspended sentence and turned over to the Home Industrial School in Washington, from which he had escaped, on a housebreaking charge.

Board Named To Survey Sites For Sea Bases

Group to Recommend Long Range Program For Development

The Navy created an eight-man board yesterday to survey the sites leased from Great Britain and all American territory and recommend a long-range program for development of bases and other shore establishments.

Acting Secretary Forrestal declared the group would revise a similar study made in 1938 by a board headed by Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, in the light of the changed international situation, developments in warfare, the great expansion of the Navy recently voted by Congress and the acquisition of the British sites.

The board, headed by Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, will also recommend a policy regarding the development of commercial facilities of importance to the Navy.

Composed of many members of a board named several weeks ago to consult with British experts on the selection of the exact sites to be leased by the United States under the destroyers-for-bases deal, it was believed that the new group would take over the work of this board.

Meanwhile the War and Navy Departments announced the award of $29,546,666 in aircraft contracts. The Army placed an order with the Beech Aircraft Corporation of Wichita, Kans., for an undisclosed number of training planes and spare parts costing $13,115,138, and a $6,829,144 contract with the Wright Aeronautical Co., Paterson, N. J., for engines. The Navy award was a $9,602,384 contract with Douglas Aircraft Co., Santa Monica, Calif., for an undisclosed number of planes.

Members of the Navy board, in addition to Greenslade, are Capt. Russell S. Crenshaw, Duette W. Rose, Supply Corps; Edmund D. Almy and James C. Byrnes and Commanders Kendall B. Bragg, Civil Engineers Corps; John J. Ballentine and James L. Holloway, recorder.

The Hepburn board recommended the immediate construction of 15 air bases, six submarine bases, a destroyer base and three mine bases. All but one of the air bases have been started, the Navy said, while the other—Guam—was turned down by Congress. Of the submarine bases, one is being built in Puerto Rico.

The board also recommended the construction of ten air bases, four submarine bases and a destroyer base for later completion. Work is now underway on all but two of the air bases and on one of the submarine bases.

Birds of War

American Aviators Rushing to Ottawa

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—There are a lot of young fellows from the United States around Canada's capital these days, most of them trying to join Canada's air force.

Some have already been accepted, some are waiting to get in, some are going into other branches of the service.

Whether they come with ample finances or hitch-hike, most of these men have had flying experience. Those seeking jobs as flying instructors—and there are many—are well-trained airmen.

"But what interests me," an officer said, "are these young fellows with nothing but a love of flying and a desire to help behind them, that come along and go into the fighting squadrons."

A typical case is that of young W. A. B., former operator of his brother's delicatessen in New Jersey. Age 24, pilot's license, 200 hours.

"All I want to do," he said, "is to get a crack at them before the thing's over. I saved up $235 to get up here and my father, he was in the R. A. F. in the last war, gave me $100 to help out. That's about all gone now."

Patman Tells Congressmen The Answers

His Primer Prepares Them to Meet the Folks Back Home

By James D. Secrest

A primer for Congressmen who would rather not answer too many questions when they go home this fall has been prepared and distributed by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas.

Patman propounds 138 questions and answers them without equivocation in the following manner:

"Question. How are the activities of Congress controlled?

"Answer. The activities of Congress are largely controlled by political parties. The principal ones are the Democrats and the Republicans."

Or:

"Question. Is there a bar in the Capitol?

"Answer. No; the last saloon was taken out of the Capitol in 1903."

One of the most readily usable questions and answer sets, perhaps, is the following:

"Question. Do members of Congress become wealthy by reason of their service?

"Answer. Members do not accumulate very much, if anything, by reason of their service. Representatives every two years and Senators every six years are called upon to spend quite sizeable sums for campaign expenses. In addition, living expenses in Washington are high."

Patman also provides an answer for the query often raised by political rivals as to why members should pay themselves 20 cents a mile when railroads will carry them for 3 or 3½ cents.

"Most members have families," the answer says . . . They must leave their homes and move to Washington for the session and then move back."

The primer explains that the Capitol and White House are a mile apart because George Washington thought that would keep Presidents from meddling in legislative matters. It admits that the telephone and the auto have made this distance negligible.

"Question. Have these changes destroyed the independence of Congress?

"Answer. All of these changes, however, have not destroyed the independence of Congress. When Congress and the President are controlled by the same political party, Congress generally passes the bills the President recommends but not always."

"Question. What are the duties of members of Congress?

"Answer. They are many and manifold. He should study legislation and attend the meetings of the House. He should listen to a good deal of the debate but not all of them by any means . . ." Et cetera, et cetera.

Argentina Launches Corn Surplus Program

Buenos Aires, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Argentine grain regulating board purchased about 40,000,000 bushels of surplus corn today, on its first day of operations under the law which established the body.

The board is authorized to pay 4.75 pesos per 100 kilograms, a rate equal to about 25 cents a bushel. It spent 47,500,000 pesos—about $10,000,000—in the day's operations.

It was presumed generally that most of the corn would go into storage and that part would be used for the distillation of alcohol for motor fuel.

Roxas Appeals For Philippine Armaments

Manila Secretary Asks Extension of U. S. Trade Privileges

Copyright by New York Times

Manila, Sept. 17.—In what was plainly a Philippine feeler for breaking down independence law restrictions and inducing America to arm the islands against aggression, Finance Secretary Manuel Roxas pleaded for a ten-year extension of trade privileges after 1946, in a transpacific broadcast.

Roxas consulted both President Quezon and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the governor general, before appealing for "more arms, more ammunition, more airplanes and other equipment essential to warfare which is not produced in these islands."

He pleaded for outright protection by America's Navy and forthrightly admitted that "we now find our task of economic readjustment not only extremely difficult but practically impossible during the period granted us," meaning six more years during which "difficulties" will be aggravated by the imposition of export taxes, and limitations on our exports to the United States beginning next January."

Roxas proposed that the Philippine-American trade conference, provisionally scheduled for 1944, meet before the end of this year "so our present problems and difficulties may be submitted to Congress for action at its next session."

It was considered noteworthy, however, that Senor Roxas did not ask for postponement of political independence. On the contrary, he specified "any change in the program for economic adjustment, need not postpone or alter the date of independence prescribed in the independence act."

Roxas said:

"I make this proposal in the firm belief that the American people have the interests of the Philippines at heart and that it is their desire to launch the Philippine free republic under circumstances which will permit it to survive and not be a helpless prey to greed and tyranny of other powers."

WPA Project Planned for Burnside Span

Special Dispatch to The Post

Sharpsburg, Md., Sept. 17.—Burnside Bridge, on the Antietam Battlefield, where historians say the Northern Army missed its opportunity to conclude the Civil War three years earlier than it did end, is to be restored to its wartime appearance, as are other high spots of the battlefield under a program announced by the National Park Service.

In addition to removing buildings on land recently presented to the Government which were not there at the time of the battle, the project provides for repairing and repainting Burnside Bridge across Antietam Creek, replacing concrete coping of the bridge with wartype wood coping, removal of monuments at corner of bridge and reconstruct these corners to wartime appearance. War-type mountain stone also will replace the ornamental iron fence around the War Correspondents' Monument at Crampton's Gap.

Greek Line Starts Regular Sailings To Mediterranean

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—War-throttled trade routes into the Mediterranean got a new lease on life today with the announcement by Garcia & Diaz, shipping agents, that the steamer Anghyra sailed yesterday from New York for Piraeus, Greece, and Istanbul, Turkey, and the steamer Patrai left Piraeus today for New York.

The vessels, sailing under the Greek flag, are owned by the Greek company, Helenic Lines, Ltd. Cargoes are fully certified.

A regular schedule of sailings will be offered, the agents for the Greek line said.

Departure of the vessels marked the resumption of Mediterranean trade interrupted in mid-June. When Italy entered the war, sailings under the United States flag were banned by the Neutrality Act. War hazards induced other nations to curtail activity.

The war risk insurance rate on the eastbound voyage was said to be around 25 per cent of the cargo's value.

London Stocks

London, Sept. 17 (AP).—Security prices closed unchanged to only a shade lower today while the "jitty" continued to weigh chances of a Nazi invasion of Britain. Turnover, hampered by disruptive air raids recently, remained slim. British government bonds closed uniformly unchanged after some of the longer-dated issues wavered in early trade. Industrial leaders, except for a slightly weak strain in home brewery stocks, remained mostly at overnight levels. Demand picked up a bit near the finish. Other groups showed only minor variations.

Unrealistic Treasury Rulings Seen Retarding Defense Plans

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
Economic Commentator.

Dramatic war developments have been altering the range of interest of Americans in domestic economic issues. Thus, a chapter has been closed and a new one opened.

Right now alert fact finders are of the impression that the public is concerned over the time lag between placing defense orders and getting the guns, airplanes and tanks.

Mr. Rukeyser

William S. Knudsen, shortly after he became head of the National Defense Advisory Commission, in conversation with me, observed that he feared that there would be lack of clear understanding of the necessary time that must elapse before the inventory of actual war materials would become substantial.

Mr. Knudsen and his associates made a valiant attempt to clear away any factors making for delay such as unrealistic Treasury rulings regarding the rate of depreciation and obsolescence on emergency war plants, but that matter is still awaiting final disposition in Congress.

Out in Evansville, Ind., leading industrialists believe in the democratic process. Accordingly, instead of scolding politicians, they make it their business as a group organized in a cooperative league to talk directly to the bosses of politicians, namely, the voters. They do it openly in paid advertisements in the local newspapers.

The movement first got under way in 1937, after the sitdown strike was launched in Michigan. The employers of the city took the view that in the last analysis public opinion would rule, and that they couldn't blame outsiders for failing to understand the business viewpoint if businessmen remained tongue tied.

As an index of the trend of public thinking, the Evansville league is now directing its attention and energies to popular education of why it takes considerable time to deliver new kinds of materials which are "on order." The contemplated campaign will explain the preliminary steps of blue prints and designs, fashioning new machine tools and equipment, and assembling a staff of skilled personnel.

An important, yet unheralded trend, in American industry is the conscious emergence from the dog-eat-dog phase of competition. Instead better-managed companies are instructing their purchasing agents to let the supplies live and earn a decent profit, instead of trying to pulverize the price structure.

This new attitude does not spring from mushy altruism, but rather from a recognition that they can count on continuous supplies of good quality only through permitting the suppliers to recoup their costs, including the cost of capital. The head of a nationally known food company has sent a circular letter to buyers announcing that it is the company policy to pay fair prices, which wil lenable suppliers to pay the same scale of wages and maintain the same social standards as the purchasing company itself.

The chief purchasing agent of a refrigerator company, in dealing with new suppliers, makes it a rule to ask them whether they have allowed in their etsimates for a reasonable profit. He says that this is good business, for, if he buys below cost, the supplier will always be looking for an opportunity when the buyer is off guard to make up the previous loss.

Another aspect of the situation is a growing recognition that ruthless price cutting, which results in red ink, tends to generate depressing influences in the whole economy. There is a new appreciation that prosperity springs from balanced relationships among the groups, which are in position to buy one anothers' products.

This more enlightened attitude is by no means general, yet it is significant that thoughtful industrial managers recognize that permanent satisfactory relationships must be mutually profitable.

Crude Rubber Stocks in U. S. Hit 2-Year Top

Industry, Government Cooperate to Build Defense Supply

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 17.—U. S. stocks of crude rubber rose to 212,774 long tons August 31, highest since 1938, the Rubber Manufacturers Association reported today.

Included in the total, which was 11.9 per cent more than the 190,222 tons held at the end of July, were nearly 42,000 tons acquired from Great Britain in exchange for surplus U. S. cotton.

Stocks a year ago were 40 per cent less, or a total of 152,029 tons, than current supplies. Biggest inventory this country has carried was 391,000 tons in March, 1933.

Manufacturers, working closely with the Federal Government, are building up supplies of crude rubber to forestall possible war dislocations. The Rubber Reserve Co. was formed to buy a defense chest of about 330,000 tons of rubber. Some of this has been bought in the Far East but has not reached U. S. ports.

Rubber consumption in the U. S. in August expanded 7.4 per cent to 50,477 tons from 47,011 in July but was 2.4 per cent below 51,740 in August last year.

Crude Oil Output Mounts in Week

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Daily average crude oil production in the United States rose 23,550 last week, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

Daily output averaged 3,647,400 barrels compared with 3,422,350 in the corresponding week a year ago. Kansas showed a large increase in production to lead the advance, while Illinois and Oklahoma reported sizable declines.

Reporting refineries boosted operations to 83.1 per cent of potential capacity from 81.0 per cent the previous week. The institute estimated runs of crude oil to stills for the industry as a whole at 3,580,000 barrels daily compared with 3,500,000 the week before and 3,517,00 a year ago.

FHA Issues Warning On Price Advances

By the Associated Press

The Federal Housing Administration will not permit its appraisals for new construction to cover "any unjustifiable increases" in cost of materials. Administrator Stewart McDonald warned manufacturers and builders tonight.

McDonald wrote members of the building industry that the FHA had noted with apprehension "a tendency toward increased prices in building materials" and recalled a recent statement by Leon Henderson of the Defense Commission that price increases were not justified by defense needs.

Credit Collections Gain 4.9% in Month

St. Louis, Sept. 17 (AP).—The National Retail Credit Association said today total sales of 10,728 retail stores in 31 cities of the United States and Canada increased 7 per cent in August over the same month of 1939.

The association's survey also showed an average increase of 4.9 per cent in collections and a 7.3 per cent advance in credit sales during the month over a year ago. These increases were attributed to an improvement in private employment.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Brisk activity was reported in rayon goods today with best interest in print staples for spring delivery. Prices were firm and unchanged.

The cotton goods market was strong although actual sales were limited. There was considerable inquiry for goods for delivery next year, but mills declined distant orders at current quotations.

Government orders for defense purposes contine to hold the spot light in the woolen goods trade.

Federal Reserve Industrial Index At 8-Month Peak

By the Associated Press

The defense program's effect on industries producing durable goods and textiles was credited by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday with boosting the board's index of industrial production from 121 to 123 in August.

The 123 index represented the peak of a gradual gain which started after a low of 111 had been reached in April.

While far above the 104 index of August, 1939, the industrial pace was still behind the all-time record of 126 set last December. The December figure, however, was a temporary peak produced by war speculation, and the index fell rapidly between that month and April.

Industrial gains in August mentioned by the board were in the production of steel, machinery, ships, aircraft, various kinds of finished durable goods, textiles, bituminous coal and nonferrous metals.

Stock List Scores Third Consecutive Advance; Pivotal Issues Gain $1 to $2; Trade Picks Up

New York, Sept. 17.—The third consecutive gain of the stock market today was the most vigorous of them all. A number of the pivotal leaders added one to more than two points and the composite average advanced 0.33 point. Trading on the big board was just under the 400,000 share mark compared with well under 300,000 shares on the previous bullish days.

Sentiment was improved by the continued inability of the German forces to launch their invasion of England. Rough weather on the English Channel and the activity of the R. A. F. are responsible for the present delay and it is well realized that every day the thrust is put off means one more day for England to shorten the gap between her own military preparations and those of the enemy.

Domestic political developments of the day also were reassuring to investors. The Coffeyville address of Wendell Willkie rekindled some of the fire and enthusiasm which accompanied his nomination in Philadelphia but which had been allowed to drag at the time of his acceptance speech.

Business news remained on the credit side of the ledger, being featured by the letting of additional contracts for the defense program. Commercial loans showed one of the sharpest expansions ever recorded, bringing the figure to the highest in nearly three years.

Steels and aviations were the most prominent in today's advance and there was good support for motors, rails and metals. Low-priced motor shares were turned over in big volume, notably Packard, Continental and Graham Paige. Packard was the day's most active issue, rising half a point or more than 15 per cent. Boeing led the aviations and advanced along with Douglas, Martin, Grumman, United and most of the leaders in this division. Bethlehem added 1⅜ and steel about a point, while Republic was up a major fraction. The convertible preferred and prior preferred of Republic gained 8 and 4 points, respectively.

After the close of the market, directors of Republic Steel Corporation ordered payment in full of all accumulated dividends on the company's 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock to and including next October 1.

They declared a dividend of $12 per share on that issue payable October 15 to stockholders of record September 30. A dividend of $1.30 had been declared previously, payable October 1.

The unpaid dividend accumulations on the issue at the beginning of this year amounted to $18 per share, or a total of $2,152,746. At that time 119,597 shares were outstanding. The company paid $7.50 a share during 1939.

Listed bonds were in quiet demand with virtually all groups participating in the upswing. Trading amounted only to $5,530,000 and the thin market made possible quite a few jumps of a point or two. United States Tresaury obligations were slightly higher, owing to the absence of any announcement on new or refunding loans. Highly rated corporate issues also tended to improve fractionally. The speculative groups attracted most attention.

Some of the rails were in fairly good demand, interest centering on the better speculations among the interest payers. Reorganization rails were in demand as well, however, and some smart gains appeared in that group. Convertibles moved forward with their related equities, and some demand appeared for commodity bonds, such as the paper issues. Local tractions firmed, and other special groups likewise did well.

Commodities Crawl Higher In Wary Trade

Corn Is Exception To General Move, Dips Fractionally

By the Associated Press

Most commodities inched forward in major futures markets yesterday but traders continued to keep a wary eye on the battle of Britain.

At Chicago wheat rose ⅛ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel in sympathy with buoyant tendencies in the securities market. Corn, however, dipped ⅛ to ⅝ influenced in part by favorable weather conditions for the new crop.

Buyers had to bid up cotton prices 15 to 45 cents a bale to obtain contracts at New York. Reports a large part of the new crop was going into the Government loan slowed offerings.

Gains elsewhere were limited to a few hundredths of a cent a pound. Among staples marked up were hides, silk, domestic sugar, cottonseed oil, Rio coffee, Straits tin and zins.

Cotton Futures

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Cotton buyers had to bid prices up 3 to 9 points today to obtain contracts. Final quotations were about the best for the session.

Despite ideal weather in the South, hedging sales, normally a major source of contracts, were extremely light. Hence when trade and mill interests tried to buy, prices soon responded.

Spot sales today totaled only 18,406 bales, compared with 61,329 bales a year ago. Reports indicated a large percentage of early sinnings in sections of the Southwest were being held for the Government loan.

Hedging sales arise out of purchases of spot cotton but, with spot sales skimpy, hedging is correspondingly small.

Worth street cloth dealers said the market showed the same quiet strength in evidence since the flare-up in activity several weeks ago.

Way Is Paved To Standardize Foreclosures

Model Law Adopted By National Group, FHA Aide Reports

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A heartening advance toward standardization of State home-mortgage foreclosure laws is announced by Abner H. Ferguson, first assistant administrator and general counsel, Federal Housing Administration, back from the fiftieth national conference of commissioners on uniform laws, in Philadelphia.

Mr. Ferguson was present at the meeting as chairman of the central housing committee on law and legislation which submitted to the conference a model home mortgage-foreclosure law to serve as the basis for revision of the 48 State laws.

A similar law was presented to the conference last year and was referred to a committee for further study. This time the model law met the requirements of the conference and was adopted.

Home Ownership Gains

A gain of $694,000,000 in outstanding private urban home mortgages in the Nation last year made it the best home-ownership year in a decade. This is shown by a special study of home-financing activity revealed in a Federal Home Loan Bank review. A total of $18,415,000,000 was due on mortgages secured by one-to-four-family nonfarm homes at the end of the year, as against $17,721,000,000 at the close of 1938, the review reports on figures prepared by economists of the board.

Rise in amount of outstanding private home mortgages was accompanied by the highest volume of new home mortgage lending activity since 1930, it is stated. Home mortgage loans written last year by all types of lenders in this country on non-farm property totaled $2,871,000,000, approximately $400,000,000 more than in either 1938 or 1937.

Savings and loan associations accounted for the largest single share, or 34 per cent of the total of new mortgage loans during the year, $986,000,000. One-fourth of last year's mortgage loans, or $740,000,000, was made by individuals and a miscellaneous group of leaders. Approximately one-fifth, or $610,000,000 was accounted for by commercial and trust companies. Life insurance companies and mutual savings banks were in the classification making up the balance of the loans.

Purely Personal

President Francis G. Addison, jr., Security Savings & Commercial Bank, has left for a three weeks' hunting trip in Canada.

J. Stanley Lingebach, auditor of City Bank and J. G. Stephenson, an assistant cashier of that institution, have been on vacation.

Proceedings of the convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association at Hot Springs, Va., last June, have been published and are being distributed to members. They contain reports of the convention speeches and pictures of the association's officers.

MY WORD! YOU DON'T SEEM TO HAVE.... FELT THE BLOW? NOT AT ALL!
BUT I ASSURE YOU THAT YOU'LL FEEL THIS IF YOU DON'T LISTEN TO ME.
I'M LISTENING!
THE ANSWER IS AMAZING BUT SIMPLE. YOUR PUMPS ARE REVERSED.
NONSENSE!! I HAPPEN TO KNOW THAT THEY'RE FUNCTIONING CORRECTLY!
YOU DO, EH? AND SUPPOSE I PROVE YOU'RE WRONG!
THEN, AND ONLY THEN, WILL I BELIEVE YOU!

WHAT IS BEING SO FUNNY?
WE HAVE NO JOB--AND NO PLACE TO WORK AT IT - YET HERE WE ARE AT A RAILROAD STATION WAITING FOR A TRAIN TO TAKE US TO NOWHERE!

OH—ALL—RIGHT. BUT I KNOW I LOCKED IT
WELL, WAS IT LOCKED?
IT WAS. BUT WHAT DO YOU THINK YOU DID? YOU FORGOT TO PUT THE BUTTER IN THE ICEBOX!

COME IN, JANE-
PERHAPS YOU RECOGNIZE ME, MR. AMEL?
SA-AY—WHAT'S THE MEANING OF ALL THIS?
IT MEANS YOU'RE UNDER ARREST AS A MASTER SPY—YOU'RE THE HEAD OF A RING THAT HAS BEEN SABOTAGING AMERICAN FACTORIES!
THIS IS RIDICULOUS—YOU HAVEN'T A SHRED OF PROOF—
WE HAVE YOUR AGENTS—AND JUST BECAUSE YOU PAID THEM IN CASH INSTEAD OF BY CHECK, YOU THOUGHT WE COULDN'T CONNECT THEM WITH YOU—
BUT THE NUMBERS OF THE BILLS WERE CHECKED AT THE BANK—WE HAVE THAT MONEY!
COME, ON, AMEL—WE'VE GOT PLENTY OF PROOF, THANKS TO JANE!
I SHOULDN'T BE SURPRISED IF ROUSE AND DOME DECIDED TO TALK BEFORE THIS WAS OVER, TOO!

Paul White, Director of Public Affairs and Special Events for the Columbia Broadcasting System, is the man who's responsible for having hundreds of programs unceremoniously broken into with those now very familiar words: "We interrupt this program to bring you an important news report."

Program directors have gnashed their teeth through these past few feverish years at these interruptions which have disturbed the even tenor at their radio shows.

We say more or less gladly because their artists' temperaments must have suffered at times in seeing hours of rehearsal and work suddenly gone for nought. But Monday they were able to chuckle at a sample of poetic justice.

For Paul White was making his first radio talk over CBS. It was scheduled from 3 to 3:15 p. m., and Paul was expatiating on the instantaneous coverage CBS gave to all news events, no matter what program was on the air.

At 3:08 we at WJSV called the Special Events Department in New York with the news that the President was signing the Conscription Bill and that we were ready to tell about it. A signal was given to Paul. He hesitated only a moment, then announced the interruption himself. Within a minute Albert Warner was reading the President's Conscription Proclamation. Paul never finished his talk.

Ample Accommodations Expected for Winter Increase in Patients

For the first time since Gallinger Hospital was built in 1929, the coming winter should not see the necessity of placing beds in corridors because of overcrowded wards, Supt. Edgar A. Bocock said yesterday.

Opening of the new medical and tuberculosis buildings last month has relieved congestion to a marked degree, he declared. Among evils which have been eliminated is the housing of chest patients in the medical and surgical wards, a condition which existed previously whenever the tuberculosis department was filled to capacity.

Dr. Bocock disclosed that male surgery patients were moved yesterday from the third floor of the main building to the first and second floors as a step in the improvement of conditions. The lower two floors formerly were devoted to medical patients, who have been transferred to the new building.

Alterations Underway

Alterations now being made on the fourth floor of the 11-year-old surgical building will be completed soon, permitting two floors to be devoted exclusively to obstetrics, Dr. Bocock explained. Formerly, as a one-floor department, the maternity ward was overcrowded at practically all times, mothers sometimes being compelled to sleep in corridors.

The only department which does not benefit by added space as a result of the expansion program is female surgery, Dr. Bocock declared. Barring epidemics or an emergency, this is the only branch of the hospital which could be expected to suffer any congestion this winter, according to the superintendent.

Hospital occupancy is always highest during the winter months, due to the seasonal increase in pneumonia and respiratory infections. The Gallinger census yesterday totaled 915 patients. Capacity is slightly more than 1,400, with the two new buildings in operation.

Nursing Staff Short

The superintendent said nursing personnel is not large enough to meet the expanded institution's needs. While 19 graduate nurses were added to the staff last July, the work week simultaneously was reduced from 60 to 44 hours, so that the personnel increase was not sufficient to accommodate the work reduction.

With 105 graduate nurses on the hospital roster, at least 22 more are needed, but the Commissioners' recent order to department heads to pare their 1942 budget requests indicates the Gallinger nursing corps will remain understaffed.

Contract Bridge

Today's hand was definitely and knowingly overbid to three no trump in a desperate attempt for a top score. The contract was successfully completed when the opponents confused by the bidding, put up the wrong defense.

Alvin L. Roth says of the deal: "The bidding was most unusual as we were looking deliberately for a top score, being in a bad position.

"South was completely fooled by the bidding, considering his strong hand. Upon discovering declarer with a hidden five-card club suit, he now had to guess the false bid declarer had made, and he also had to find a safe exit. He guessed wrong."

The eight of clubs was led, one of those short suit leads which frequently prove so helpful to the declarer. Low was played from the dummy; South put up the ten, and declarer won with the queen, playing back another club. The king was taken by South's ace, and South cashed the club jack.

He now was afraid of being saddled with the lead and of being compelled to give declarer the ninth trick by playing from one of his queens. He knew the bidding had been psychic, but failed to visualize the diamond situation. He played the ace and king of diamonds, establishing two tricks for declarer, which was all he needed. West made two spades, three clubs, two hearts and two diamonds to win three no trump.

Rep. Byrns Reports Suit Is Stolen From Car

The car was parked on New Jersey avenue between C and D streets southeast when a window was forced, he said.

Charges Dropped By ABC Against Four on Ninth St.

Liquor charges against four Ninth street licensees, which were visited by Daisy Mae Clark, were dropped yesterday by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Daisy Mae, whose visits to Jimmie Lake's on February 7 resulted in suspension of his liquor license for a three-month period, also alleged she was served intoxicating beverages at four other Ninth street establishments.

Charges were dropped because of "insufficient corroborative evidence" against David Moy Kee, 929 Ninth street northwest; Roy D. Bright, 510 Ninth street northwest; Louis Demas, 931 Ninth street northwest, and the New York Lunch, Inc., 943 Ninth street northwest.

'Fire' on Airliner Proves to Be 'Optical Illusion'

The safety bureau of the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday blamed an "optical illusion" for a fire scare which caused an American Airlines plane to take emergency safety measures when it landed Friday at Louisville, Ky.

A piece of tape, used to prevent chafing between the wing and metal cover strip, had worked itself loose and was fluttering in the airstream against the background of a flaming sunset, giving the appearance of fire issuing from the wing, according to the report.
